Storms take aim at battered Carmel

Carmel's Judy Miles shudders at the force of the tree that cut her house in half and wrecked another historic home next door.

■ More rain, wind follow on heels of Monday night's incredible downpour

By PAUL MILLER and PAUL WOLF

SHAKEN by the events of the week, Carmel area residents faced a new round of storms lined up in the Pacific with hopes that this week's damage wouldn't get any worse. But dire weather forecasts seemed to promise that it would.

From the remote canyons of Carmel Valley and Big Sur to the tree-lined streets of Carmel and Pebble Beach, residents agreed that the storm that moved in from the Pacific Ocean late Monday brought the heaviest local rainfall in memory.

According to water officials, they were right. The deluge that hit between midnight Monday and 10 a.m. Tuesday poured more than 3 inches of rain on coastal towns, and up to 5 inches of rain on the hills and mountains around Carmel Valley. Winds over 40 mph accompanied the dizzying downpour.

The effects could be seen all over the Peninsula, where dozens of colossal Monterey Pines — many weakened by JUDY MILES thought a freight train took a detour through her Lincoln Street home Monday afternoon. She sat frozen on the couch, her dog Brandy cowered at her feet.

"I couldn't move. It was the loudest, scariest sound I've ever heard," she told The Pine Cone.

Carmel's link to Pebble Beach was blasted away by a flash flood down Pescadero Canyon, which ripped out new culverts built to withstand a '100-year flood' as well as the main water and sewer lines to the forest and several mature trees. Crews working day and night hope to have the link to 17 Mile Drive open within a week.

A WALL of water 20 feet high roared down tiny Pescadero Canyon early Tuesday morning, undermining 17 Mile Drive, gouging a big piece out of the road that connects Carmel to Pebble Beach and sending huge chunks of asphalt, debris and mature trees toward the beach.

Granite Construction is working round-the-clock to repair the water and sewage lines and replace the culverts and roadway.

The Pebble Beach Co. hopes to have the Carmel Gate open within a week. But damage to the canyon wreaked by Mother Nature won't be so quickly

Violent, fascinating show as thousands of elephant seals invade Piedras Blancas

By KIRSTIE WILDE

A MASSIVE migration of elephant seals is taking place on the beaches just south of the Monterey County line, and the 5,000-pound creatures are putting on a thrilling show.

Alongside the babies being born on the sand within a few feet of tourists, the roaring, slashing, stupendously jealous bull elephant seals are letting everyone know who's boss of the beach.

It's a show well worth the two-hour drive from Carmel, (which obviously can't be taken until Highway 1 is open again). But biologists at the Piedras Blancas lighthouse say if you come, beware of the danger. A bull will take his revenge on anyone he sees as a threat to his harem, and if he hits you, you will flatten.

"I've seen people taking pictures of their young children standing right next to the bulls," said biologist Brian Hatfield.

Bloody fights among posturing male sea elephants are seldom fatal, because their vital parts are protected by a 4-inch layer of blubber, according to BayNet volunteer docents who are patrolling the fast-growing new herd at Piedras Blancas.

Hardy Big Sur souls batten down for more high winds

By TOM BIRMINGHAM and PAUL WOLF

WITH HIGH winds their greatest fear, residents of Big Sur are braced for a second phase of the storms of 1998, hoping their luck will hold.

"Big Sur does disaster well; people are very organized," said resident Erin Gafill.

Highway 1 north of Soberanes Point in Big Sur doesn't exist anymore.

The Red Cross plans to open a shelter at Captain Cooper School if that becomes necessary.

The first round of bad weather this week caused relatively minor damage to homes. Blown-off roofs, doors and windows were the result of winds that hit 60 m.p.h.

Loose tree limbs blocking culverts also increased the flood risk.

Big Sur residents awoke Tuesday with neither electricity nor access to Carmel, and their morning was spent clearing blocked culverts and downed trees.

By 11 a.m. Wednesday, two National Guard helicopters were transporting 352 evacuees — as well as six dogs and two cats — to the Monterey Peninsula Airport. The evacuees were mainly motel guests and business people, Gafill said.

The evacuations were necessary after a 200-foot section of Highway 1 near Soberanes Point collapsed Tuesday morning.

Caltrans reported that it would be two to three weeks before Highway 1 will be passable through the collapsed area.

The Big Sur Health Center will be opened for the housebound and others in need, according to Dr. Bill Benda of the Monterey Medical Group.

Electricity was expected to be restored Thursday afternoon.

Captain Cooper School will be closed through the rest of the week. "We have downed trees and debris in the playground," said Paul Behan, the school's principal.

Penny Vieregge, American Red Cross representative in Big Sur, said a trailer is being placed at Captain Cooper School. "If the need arises, we are ready with shelter and food."

How far is far enough?
Far enough is where bad days become good days.
Far enough is where problems become solutions.
Far enough is where you're ready to turn around and go back.

Water free of bacteria after pipeline breaks in Pescadero Creek and Carmel Valley Village

By TAMARA GRIPPI

DESPITE "BOIL water" warnings in Carmel, Carmel Valley and other nearby areas, no water was contaminated by this week's flood, Cal-Am announced.

Most of the Peninsula suffered water outages and loss of water pressure, according to Roger Ward, a water quality superintendent for Cal-Am. And in Carmel Valley Village, a break in the water line near Tularcitos Creek gave Cal-Am officials the most concern.

The break loosened sediment in pipelines and filters, making the water cloudy, Ward said. However, just because water has a high level of turbidity doesn't mean that it's been contaminated by bacteria, Ward said.

"Whatever water was in the transmission main now has been properly treated," he explained.

On Feb. 3 Cal-Am experts collected water samples and incubated them for 24 hours. The most recent tests on that water show no presence of bacteria in the Carmel Valley supply, Ward said.

In addition to the samples taken in the Carmel Valley water supply, Cal-Am's technicians also took a variety of samples in Carmel and Pebble Beach.

"We have no reason to believe water quality has been compromised in any way," Ward said.

Some Carmel and Pebble Beach customers were hard hit by a broken water main across Pescadero Creek. Their

Woman called sheriff because she lost her umbrella

HERE'S A look at some of the significant calls logged by the Carmel-by-the-Sea Police Department and the Monterey County Sheriff's Department last week.

SUNDAY, JANUARY 25

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Report of a suspicious male walking in area of Carmelo and 9th with a flashlight. Unable to locate.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Assisted CFD on dumpster fire.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Subject at 6th and Newberry feeling faint. Transported to CHOMP.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Report of two males at Mission and 8th who appeared to have weapons — possibly guns — in their pockets. One subject was contacted. He had no gun and had no idea where the story came from. The other subject was his brother. He had no gun either.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Resident at Santa Fe near 3rd panicked when a small oil lamp cracked. Officer put out fire.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Residents on Mission and 7th reported that someone used a blunt instrument to pry back piece of aluminum on their front door. No attempt was made to damage or tamper with locks. Close patrol requested.

MONDAY, JANUARY 26

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Woman on Dolores near 3rd reports someone had thrown eggs at her parked vehicle. The eggs were concentrated on the left-rear fender. Also, vandals threw eggs at the front display window of a shop on Ocean near Junipero. No permanent damage. No suspects.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Subjects admonished for sleeping in vehicle at Lincoln and Ocean.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Resident on Ridgewood reports "thumping" noises on her front door. Officer checked the outside area — nothing noted.

Carmel area: A Carpenter Street resident said family's home was entered and several items taken.

Carmel area: A Tierra Grande resident reports his brief case stolen from his Ford Ranger via a smashed passenger side window.

Carmel area: A local real estate agent

Carmel police warn citizens not to enter barricaded areas

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

"WOULD YOU please put in the paper that people should stay out of roped-off areas and not cross police barricades?" The plaintive request from a weary Carmel police officer who, after 48 hours of clearing roads, assisting citizens in distress, and handling numerous emergencies resulting from Monday's huge downpour, was surprised at how careless some of Carmel's citizens can be.

"When we block-off a street or put up a barricade, it's for a very good reason. There's a hazard that we are trying to protect you from. A downed power line or a sink hole. But some people just drive on in!" the officer stated.

One citizen called The Pine Cone this week to complain that officials took too long to open up one street in town. But other citizens heaped praised on the quick work done to repair the storm's damage.

Police officers say that some people evidently feel that a street that remains blocked off for several days is probably safe to enter anyway. But just the opposite is true.

PG&E also repeated the usual warning that downed wires should not be touched.

Big winds toppled a telephone pole, which dropped on a Ford Explorer. The owner, remarkably, was able to drive away from the scene that same day.

Carmel Public Works Director Jim Cullem noted the unusual way in which a tree trunk broke off, taking with it wires which littered the street at Camino Del Monte and Torres.

STORM

the pitch canker epidemic and with only soggy earth to hold on to — gave way suddenly without regard to what lay in their paths. Several homes were heavily damaged and dozens of power lines were torn from their poles like thread.

Pine Cone photographers who flew over the area Tuesday and Wednesday saw countless canyons that had suddenly become raging torrents. Billions of gallons of water — mixed into a slurry of fallen tress, rocks and soil gouged from the soft earth — barreled ahead undermining homes, eroding hillsides, taking out bridges, blocking roads, and obliterating several main thoroughfares.

Hundreds of families were evacuated from their homes along the Carmel River Monday night. Some families in Big Sur and Carmel Valley were trapped when mudslides blocked the roads.

Minor damage was widespread. Flood waters contaminated Cal-Am wells and for two days Carmel area residents were told to boil tap water before drinking it.

Carmel River itself — unlike the floods of 1995 — largely stayed within its banks. Mission Fields residents, whose homes were devastated twice in 1995, were thrilled that for the most part they were left high-and-dry.

"We'll be OK — if the rain we get over these next couple of days is comparable to what we had earlier this week," said Larry Levine, a Riverside Way resident who helped secure repairs to the levee system that spared his Mission Fields neighborhood from disaster.

By all accounts evacuations were done just in time this year, in contrast to the first flood of 1995 when county authorities were criticized for giving an evacuation order even as waters were rushing into homes.

No storm-related deaths were reported in Carmel, Carmel Valley, Big Sur or Pebble Beach. Property damage county-wide has been estimated at $10 million — so far.

"Here you have trees and lines crashing down, but no one gets hurt — that never ceases to amaze me," said Carmel Public Works Director Jim Cullem.

By Thursday afternoon, floodwaters had receded and clean-ups begun, but the next storm front was ominously moving in.

Local communities are on high alert with several inches of rain and 50 mph winds forecast for Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

Carmel City Forester Gary Kelly said Wednesday he expects many more trees to fall as a result of the saturated soil in the village.

Carmel City Hall has been virtually shut down all week as the government focused on emergency response.

The pavement was a mess at Camino Del Monte between Pico and Torres, closed off to traffic this week. Two trees and two sets of wires came down within 200 yards of each other.

Everyone affected

The life of anyone who drinks water, uses power or drives a car was disrupted by the events of the week. At one point, 3,500 households in Carmel-by-the-Sea were without power. Some residents in Pebble Beach, Carmel Highlands and Big Sur were still without water or power as of Thursday afternoon.

Within 200 yards of each other, on Camino Del Monte between Pico and Torres, two trees fell on power lines, causing PG&E to close a full block.

When Cal-Am Water Co. turned the water back on in Carmel early Tuesday afternoon, a water main broke at Second and San Carlos, spewing water on the roots of 100-foot pine, forcing the evacuation of two homes and the removal of the tree. That was just the start: In all, at least 16 city-owned trees and 13 private trees went down within the city.

Elsewhere, a telephone poll on the San Carlos side of Sunset Center fell on a Ford Explorer. The pole took with it a healthy eucalyptus tree. A Carmel businessman was able to drive the damaged car away even while the pole dangled over the closed section of road at San Carlos south of Seventh.

Emergency command

For five-and-a-half hours Monday afternoon and evening, city officials activated the emergency command center in the Carmel Police Department basement to streamline its overtaxed staff. They said that decision was based not on flooding or flooding potential, but on the ravages caused by 45 to 60 mph winds.

City officials also expressed pride at the proper functioning of the bypass built in 1996 that channels runoff from town into the Carmel River.

Runoff originating from the hills on the east side of town travels in pipes and creeks the length of Mission Trail Park and eventually goes under Rio Road and Larsen Field, behind the Mission.

water wasn't contaminated, however, because the spilled water went into a creek, not into the pipeline, said Jerry Haas, operations manager for Cal-Am.

Carmel Woods was most affected by the break, with 2,000 customers losing their water. One thousand other customers throughout Pebble Beach and Carmel also lost their water, Haas said.

According to Haas, 30-feet of pipe in the canyon can't be restored until the repairs are finished on the road at the Carmel Gate. Granite Construction Co. crews and dozens of subcontractors are working 24-hours-a-day to complete repairs on the road.

Cal-Am supplied drinking water in tanks in Vista Lobos parking lot for those Carmelites who lost their water, or who were concerned about the safety of the water coming from their taps.

Police department to hold academy

THE CARMEL-by-the-Sea Police Department is offering a 12-week citizens police academy to run from March 5 to May 21.

Classes will be held Thursday evenings. Topics will include developing a criminal case, police ethics, discipline, narcotic enforcement and firearms.

Applications are available at the police department.

Your time-saving, clip and send family letter

Dear Sis:

(OK, OK, I know this is supposed to be a column, but I owe my sister a letter, and this is IT! Since you probably owe someone a letter too, why not just clip this one and send it on. The recipient, having not heard from you for a very, very long time, has probably forgotten how many kids you have anyhow, and what their names are, so they'll just read it and think, "Oh God, now I owe HER a letter!")

So I repeat: Dear Sis:

I had a really nice visit from two of my kids this week. Davy arrived Thursday — 3 p.m. sharp, mindful that his mother needed her nap before she could walk downtown with him. The sun was out after the morning's rain as we discussed Life and Love. Well, "chicks," to be exact.

On such occasions I sometimes look up to find passers-by staring at what might be considered "the odd couple": the more-than-middle-aged woman and the six-footer with frosted blonde hair well below his shoulders. I've grown so used to his "rocker" image that I rarely think about it anymore, but once in a while I wonder how he'd look with a real haircut. "Even Michael Bolton," I tell him, "has cut his hair, and is singing classical."

Back at the house we find Jazzy, my son's golden retriever, who's been agonizing over his absence. She dances out of the den where she's been cowering, clearly overjoyed at their reunion while the man of the house grouses privately to me that my son's dog is "neurotic."

"Dogs LOVE me," he says, "and Jazzy just looked terrified whenever I tried to get her to come out."

I explain to him that it's NOT personal, that she treats everyone that way. But he is clearly miffed. I tell him it might make a good segment on "Seinfeld" if George felt insulted by a DOG. That ends the discussion; my beloved does not like being compared to George. After dinner he picks up the book he's reading, and Davy and I start a game of Scrabble.

I guess you had to be there. My son at 35 is as silly and noisy as he was at 12. And when we're together, I am just as bad. We needle, nudge, joke and squeal when we play games. It is NOT conducive to reading. The man of the house gets up and goes to take a bath, hopeful of finding some peace.

The next morning Peggy arrives, having already had her yoga class at 7 a.m. She looks terrific, as usual, and over breakfast tells us all about the new "ayurvedic" 30-day health plan she's on. I hope I spelled that right. She tells me it's from some ancient Indian (as in India) beliefs. She's hoping it helps her chronic bronchial problems. She tells me my calcium pills are more or less worthless, that I should be buying a different kind. I always learn something new from that girl. She's a walking encyclopedia of New Age medicine, and seems to have forgiven me for never remembering that she's a vegetarian. Nibbling on my delicious extra-crisp bacon at From Scratch, I feel a little like Henry the Eighth gnawing on a boar's head.

The three of us talk about the absent sibling, Patty, who lives in Santa Barbara and is nearly six months along. We discuss the merits of the films she has seen in pregnancy class, showing actual live births. I observe that this is not the view the delivering mother sees anyhow, so why bother? We leave it at that. We decide to visit Grove Homescapes in Pacific Grove where I have some paintings on display. (Moms have to brag too!) I gamely climb into Davy's new sport utility vehicle. Peg owns one too. They both know I hate the bloody things.

Seated behind the driver's seat, I find myself looking at the back of David's headrest. It's like facing a blank TV screen, and absolutely no help for the queasiness I experience as we tool around the curves on Highway 68.

Sis, YOU know I'm no back seat driver, but I can't help it. I tell Davy, "You're SCARING me." He slows a bit, and being "The Perfect Son" (as he signs his email), gives me no argument. Peg, bless her heart, offers to take the back seat on the way home.

We do the whole P.G. tour, and find that Peggy has never met a store she didn't like. Davy and I cool our heels outside while she looks, and I begin to wilt like a tired daisy.

We drive back to my house (without crashing) and the kids go off to eat again, leaving me to curl up for another nap. (It's a hard habit to break.) When they come back, it's time for both to hit the road. Peg heads north; Davy heads south. Waving them off I get tears in my eyes for some unexplained reason, then go back into the house to tell my beloved that he's not a BIT like George.

Love, BEV

repaired, and the owners of a landmark house at its mouth are worried about more erosion.

"A swath 70 feet wide and 600 feet long of the canyon has been destroyed and another 100 feet is threatening to cave in," said Carl Panattoni, who with his wife Jane is restoring the stone mansion at the far north end of Carmel beach.

The multi-million dollar home has a colorful history. It was built in the 1920s and from 1962 to 1978 was occupied by Count Bertrand d'Avenas and his family. The count sold the property to actor Gene Hackman, who stripped the interior. The house was then purchased by Craig McFarland, who was jailed for bank fraud in the early '90s after an international manhunt tracked him from Carmel to Morocco.

The Panattonis are heartsick about the damage to the canyon, which, just a few days ago, was lush with vegetation and mature pine, eucalyptus and cypress. Now it has been scraped bare, and the bank protecting their home is gone. They fear that another 100 feet could cave in any minute.

"With a relatively small amount of prevention, this environmental disaster could have been prevented," said Panattoni.

The Pescadero Canyon bank that protected the landmark stone mansion at the north end of Carmel beach has been ripped out by a wall of flood water.

Now he anticipates a very expensive, 200-foot retaining wall will be needed to shore up the canyon wall. The irony of the disaster is that the Panattonis have worked with the city for years to design and build an improved retaining wall to protect the cliff from a different watery assault: The Pacific Ocean. They recently completed a landscaped stone façade to cover up the homely sandbag wall (put up by previous owners) that had marred the north end of Carmel beach for years.

With more rain in the forecast, and no time to clean out the debris from several huge trees that toppled into the canyon, the Panattonis are bracing for more flooding and praying that the 10 feet of bank they have left won't be scoured away.

Rushing runoff, mudslides threatened residents in C.V.

By TAMARA GRIPPI

FOR CARMEL Valley residents, the early wake-up call February 3 felt eerily familiar.

Runoff water was sweeping down the hills and impending mudslides threatened people on Carmel Valley Road and in the village.

The residents of Hacienda Carmel, many who were in wheelchairs or on oxygen' were taken to nearby shelters at Carmel Middle School and MPC.

This was nothing new for Hacienda resident Helen Hansen, who sat tight in the Carmel Middle School shelter waiting for news of her home. Back in 1995, Hansen's house was destroyed. "It never gets to be deja-vu," she said. "It's like a horrible new experience every time."

Hansen was worried about the 17-year-old cat she thought she had to leave at home. Hansen apparently did not know that the SPCA had donated about a dozen kennels to the shelter. Red Cross Shelter manager Laurie Schumann said the shelter served 125 people (and several dogs and cats) early tree crashing through the roof slammed the walls through the floor, buckling the tiles and snapping electrical wires and 2 by 4s. It literally cut her house in half.

Judy was not hurt, but she and her dog could sure use a place to rent in Carmel, right away. "If anybody out there could care for my sweet Golden Retriever for a couple of weeks I would be so grateful," she said.

Judy is staying with a friend in Pacific Grove, but her dog is not permitted. Her friend, Joe Fournier, welcomes calls at 644-6069 from anyone who can help.

Uninvited guest

Meanwhile, next door, June Armstrong has an uninvited guest: the other end of the big pine is in her kitchen. She had an even closer call during the storm Feb. 2.

"I had just left the kitchen three minutes before when I heard a horrible sound," she said.

The tree landed right next to the stove and could certainly have killed anyone standing there. Armstrong wasn't injured, and is staying with her daughter in Prunedale while her house is repaired.

The Armstrong home is historic, originally built as a hay barn in 1905. The living room was done by celebrated arts-and-crafts architect Charles Sumner Green in the '20s. "We'll restore it the way it was," promised Armstrong.

Neighbor Harriet Harrell, a Carmel resident for 26 years, shook her head as she passed by, marveling that the tree didn't injure anybody. "I've never been so happy to see a tree come down in my life. It wasn't healthy, anybody could see that," she said.

If the tree had blown in the opposite direction, it would have been Harrell's house in harm's way. "Look at that one," she gestured to another towering pine. "It could fall on us the next time the wind blows."

This Monterey pine, which neighbors say was obviously not a healthy tree, crashed into one home on Lincoln and another on 13th Avenue in Carmel.

County says Eastwood's Cañada Woods project was not the cause of serious flooding across Carmel Valley Road

By KIRSTIE WILDE

RUMORS WERE flying in Carmel Valley this week as people tried to find somebody besides Mother Nature to blame for the flooding on one section of Carmel Valley Road. A dirty brown river poured across the highway and into Hacienda Hay and Feed, Valley Hills shopping center and six homes at Quail Lodge subdivision.

"We heard two levees on Clint Eastwood's Cañada Woods property broke," said one shopkeeper.

"It's never flooded like this before — Clint better 'fess up and pay for all this damage," said another.

"It was the grading Clint is doing on his new golf course that caused the flood," reported a caller to The Pine Cone.

However, the lead Monterey County planner overseeing Eastwood's Cañada Woods development refuted the accusations, saying the work done on the project so far has done nothing to increase runoff. Brian Foucht says the retention basins (depressions in the land engineered to hold runoff) that were constructed by Alan Williams for Eastwood actually decreased the amount of water coming off the property.

"They have constructed twice as much holding capacity as the hydrology calculations demanded," said Foucht. "If anything, they've done more than they needed to. We've had people question whether the golf course is contributing to runoff. Actually what's being done will do the reverse, will aid in percolation. Nothing was done on the golf course site to change the drainage patterns or increase runoff."

Williams said the incredible downpour (measured at almost five inches in 10 hours) on his 2,500-acre project was simply an act of God that nothing could divert.

"We built about 80 feet of sandbagged walls above the retention basins to try to increase capacity and stall for time, but mudslides tore them out and silted up the basins," said Williams. "We were up all night, along with Gerry Paddock's people at Carmel Valley Construction, trying to divert the water away from homes and businesses."

Gary Rotter, the new owner of Hacienda Hay and Feed, lost a lot of his inventory to the flood, but ironically, it was his landlord, Russell Wolter, who was blamed by Williams for stalling a county flood control project.

"Over a year ago the county designed a two-foot-by-16-foot culvert to replace the 18-inch one that's under Carmel Valley Road now," said Williams. "We were ready to pay for it and build it last fall, but part of it ran under Wolter's property and he wouldn't cooperate."

Monterey County Counsel Efren Iglesia confirmed that his office is proceeding with appraisal and condemnation of a 10-foot wide strip on Wolter's frontage to force him to allow the culvert installation. "That could take six months or a year," said Iglesia.

Wolter told The Pine Cone that he simply did not want the culvert under his property. "We are not in favor of us solving a problem for a different person," he said. "Let Eastwood build it on his own property."

Non-existent levees

Although several people repeated the story that "levees broke" on Eastwood's Cañada Woods project, The Pine Cone was able to absolutely confirm that no such levees exist. "There are no levees up there at all," said Chief Carmichael, planner Foucht, and Eastwood himself. "People are probably confusing the levees we removed down by the Odello artichoke fields to help protect Mission Fields," said the actor Wednesday night after flying by helicopter over the entire area. "I guarantee that the water from Cañada would be quadrupled if it hadn't been for the catch basins we created, the diligent work that has been done up there."

Eastwood went on to urge people to pull together during the coming storms, instead of pointing fingers. "If people believe in God and believe in nature, they should know that nobody can compete with these forces. Instead of making up lies about levees, everybody should work together."

The Golden Years

By Myles Williams

Most company pension plans are fully funded, but shortfalls in some plans have increased.This was reported by the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corp. (PBGC), which pays a portion of benefits if a pension program fails. The PBGC found that 66 percent of the 55,000 plans it insures were fully funded, but shortfalls in others totaled $64 billion at the end of 1995. Shortfalls increased because lower interest rates reduced earnings of pension fund investments. Plans of more than 13,000 companies covering 15 million employees were underfunded. In half of these, shortfalls amounted to no more than 10 percent.

Longtime merchants on South Fourth Street in Philadelphia are pleased that the city has designated their block "Fabric Row". That's where decorators and fashion designers go to find ideal fabrics for their projects. And they count on the expertise of merchants like Samuel Goldberg who learned the trade from the bottom up, sweeping floors as a teenager. At 85-plus he is at his shop, but no longer travels the world to find exquisite fabrics. Buying now is done by partner Marvin Gomer, 66.

SEALS

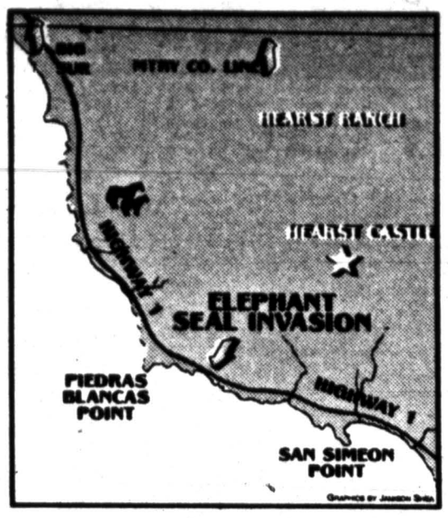
"Most of the time the males just lay there, but sometimes they charge. At least three people have been bitten by juvenile seals."

The crowds are being controlled somewhat by volunteer docents from BayNet, who patrol the beaches Fridays through Mondays from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Their job is as much to protect the tourists from the seals, as the other way around.

"They say the bulls can get up to 25 m.p.h. over a short stretch of beach," said docent Dottie Boulian. "I asked one gentleman who had wandered right through the harem, 'do you realize how dangerous these creatures are?' And he said, 'Oh, I thought they were asleep!'" Boulian is one of the 30 docents in the Cambria area who put in 150 hours a year educating elephant seal watchers on the beach. She said most people keep a respectful distance and are perfectly safe if they stay up on the 5-foot bluff. "The seals can't climb up the bluff."



Population explosion

The BayNet docent program represented something of an emergency measure as the elephant seal population around Piedras Blancas lighthouse exploded from zero in 1990, to an estimated 6,000 this year, including more than 1,000 pups. Nineteen juvenile seals came ashore in the 1990 vanguard, and biologists have spotted tagged animals in the current herd from as far away as Point Reyes, the Farallones and the Channel Islands.

"There are indications that some of the rookeries on the Channel Islands are getting full," said Hatfield, "and the mainland colonies are increasing. If the overall population continues to grow, it's quite conceivable that they could establish another beachhead elsewhere."

("Diggy," a year-old elephant seal which crawled onto Carmel beach two weeks ago, was transported to the Sausalito marine mammal center, where he is being treated for a lung parasite and infected flipper. Whether "Diggy" was simply disoriented, or scouting for a new home, is anybody's guess.)

Rough sea for newborns

Besides watching the male sea elephants fight for dominance over their harems, the docents have been thrilled by the sight of pups being born right before their eyes on the beach. The newborns look like black fur bags of bones, and are indeed helpless. According to Hatfield, they cannot swim until they are about three months old, and several have been swept out to sea by the recent high tides and big surf.

"White sharks feed on them," said the biologist. "They'll also attack yearlings, juveniles, even the bulls."

But the Piedras Blancas herd is obviously a spectacular success story, especially when compared to the growth of the colony at Año Nuevo, which took 18 years to grow from a handful to 1,000 seals. Piedras Blancas has multiplied to six times that size in only seven years.

If you go to see this awesome show, there is one other caution: Watch out for bumps in the road. A 3,000-pound bull crawled right up on Highway 1 and was hit by a car in November.

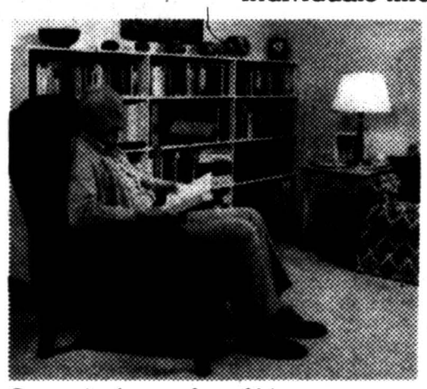
For retired college professor George Rommel, travel has been a life-long passion. He's circumnavigated the globe four times.

But for all the places he's been and things he's seen, nothing measures up to the quality of life he enjoys on the Monterey Peninsula.

George lived for 14 years in a house he designed in Carmel. When he began to look at his retirement living options, he didn't have to look very far.



George in the comfort of his apartment

At Canterbury Woods, he found a community of active individuals like himself who appreciate carefree, independent living in one of the most beautiful places on earth.

George enjoys the privacy of his own apartment, the companionship of friends both old and new, and the peace of mind that comes with the guarantee of comprehensive lifetime medical care.

Lou Russo: AT&T chief had to weather his own storm

By JERRY STEWART

IF THE only thing that Lou Russo, AT&T Pebble Beach National Pro-Am executive tournament director does prior to March 2 is sleep, please forgive him.

He was just a little bit busy last week.

When storms began pelting the Peninsula last week, putting the tournament's fate in jeopardy, Russo had to weather a brunt of questions regarding the event.

In a press conference conducted at The Lodge last Sunday, Russo explained some of the decisions which were made during the event.

For example, Russo was asked whether an earlier starting day, say Tuesday or Wednesday, would help make the tournament's final round a given.

"That doesn't work out," said Russo. "The pros are coming from another tournament."

Lou Russo

Since 1996's cancellation, one of Russo's and the PGA Tour's main goals is to make sure that 54 holes are played and the event is official.

Some people have also questioned whether more golf could have been played on Thursday and Friday, when the weather was somewhat cooperative.

"If you know the rotation and the way we start at the 10th and first tees, there is no way in the world we could have played any more than we did."

According to Russo, the problems with this year's AT&T Pro-Am kept him up almost every night tossing and turning.

"You hear the rain drops and are awake the rest of the night until 5:30 a.m., you look at the golf courses, wonder if you are going to luck out, get blue skies. It's frustrating."

Despite being flustered, Russo said that the event's corps of volunteers deserved some recognition for their efforts.

"I feel sorry for the volunteers, out there in the rain and mud," said Russo. "They aren't paid anything, they just love to do it."

Although this year's event marked the second cancellation in three years, Russo also said he felt the outcome wouldn't affect future ticket sales or sponsorships.

"The year before last when we did get rained out it didn't affect us that bad," Russo said. "Our ticket sales were up in 1997. People expect it or know it's there."

To speed up play for this year's tourney, the player field was reduced from 180 to 168 participants, but with the lift, clean and place rule in effect, a tournament round still took nearly six hours.

In the tournament's 52-year history, the event has been totally canceled only once, in 1996.

AT&T's final round promises to be in class by itself

By JERRY STEWART

WHEN THE AT&T Pebble Beach National Pro-Am resumes play March 2, the tournament will feature a finish like no other.

For one thing, the players will find themselves competing on three separate courses during the final round.

Secondly, some of the players who were at the top of the leader board may not be able to finish due to other commitments.

> 'Obviously, it won't be fair to everyone. I'm sure there will be some no-shows. But whatever date you pick, there will be some conflict.'
> — Tom Watson

As of last Monday, Cathy Scherzer, tournament administrator, said that tournament officials don't exactly know how many players will commit to returning.

"Most likely the only players who will come will be those with a chance to win or make some money," said Scherzer.

According to Scherzer, last weekend's Sunday tickets and season badges will be honored, and the AT&T office will have records of "pre-purchased" tickets in case they were lost.

The tournament will be wrapped up in one day. And although Pebble Beach Golf Links has many scoreboards, Spyglass Hill and Poppy Hills have few, meaning that players will have to sometimes rely upon other means to find out their position in the standings.

Tom Watson, who will be tied for the lead with Tim Herron at 10-under, said that he would consider using a radio to gather information about the standings.

"I think radios are fun to use," said Watson. "I'll also ask officials to give me an update."

The third round will be played from the beginning, as the PGA's decision wiped out scores shot during Sunday's canceled round.

In postponing play until March, Watson said the PGA Tour had made a creative decision.

"Obviously, it won't be fair to everyone," said Watson. "I'm sure there will be some no-shows. But whatever date you pick, there will be some conflict."

In an effort to make the final round possible, it's expected that the Pebble Beach Co. will free up facilities and tee times when necessary.

"We have to thank the Pebble Beach Co.," said Lou Russo, the tournament's executive director.

Scherzer said that arrangements will be made for an airline charter from Los Angeles to Monterey which will shuttle players following the conclusion of the Nissan Open March 1. After finishing the final round, players will head to the Doral-Ryder Open in Miami.

OPINION

Editorial

Loving trees . . . and fearing them

CARMEL HAS long taken pride in its 'urban forest.' This phrase during most months of the year poetically conveys the ideal of humans living in the midst of nature.

But nearly every winter the urban forest ideal is transformed into a nightmare for many Carmelites who live in heavy fear that one of the town's aged, towering Monterey Pines will suddenly crash to earth — smashing itself, a home and a human life or two to bits.

That fear is palpable in town right now as a series of fierce Pacific storms bears down on beautiful, forested Carmel. Many of Carmel's citizens tremble when they hear a forecast — such as the one being broadcast as this is being written — of more heavy rains and 70 mph winds. A storm like that could bring down hundreds of trees.

Even a healthy tree has a hard time maintaining its grip on sodden ground when a mighty wind is pushing its crown. And of course many of Carmel's huge pines are not in great shape, thanks to the pine pitch canker epidemic. The Monterey County Planning Commission was told two weeks ago that 85% of Monterey Pines — including those in Carmel-by-the-Sea — will eventually die from the disease. Thousands of trees within the city limits are sick right now.

It's too bad that hardly any residents of Carmel attended that meeting. Because another very important fact about the Monterey Pine was conveyed by several scientists who spoke to the commission — a recipe, in fact, for maintaining the health of the Monterey Pine forest in and around Carmel.

A mature forest, the scientists said, is supposed to be destroyed by fire periodically. When fire sweeps through a Monterey Pine forest — such as happened on Huckleberry Hill in Pebble Beach ten years ago — the forest itself benefits and the future of the Monterey Pine species is assured.

This happens because the fire kills most of the older trees. Pine cones open, the thick carpet of needles is burned off, sunlight reaches the forest floor, seeds germinate, and a new forest — replete with genetic diversity and the concomitant promise of resistance to disease — replaces the old one.

This is what happened all through the millennia until man intervened.

The scientists' confidently predicted that the Monterey Pine, if properly managed with fire or with methods that imitate the impact of fire, will survive the current fungal assault.

But their optimistic analysis also means that there is no scientific or environmental reason why a huge Monterey Pine that threatens the life of a human living in its shadow cannot be cut down.

The trees that can take lives, after all, are the very same trees that nature would eliminate with a forest fire if it had the opportunity.

But in the City of Carmel, cutting down a tree that isn't demonstrably near death is nearly impossible. Not for scientific or environmental reasons, but for aesthetic reasons. Living among trees is very pleasing, especially during the months when there is little danger that one will fall on you.

But should your neighbor's sense of aesthetics override your need to protect yourself from physical harm?

Obviously, the answer is no. Trees which are a threat should be cut down and replaced by new trees which will beautify the City of Carmel for seventy or eighty years before they, in turn, are removed to make way for another generation. Just the way nature does it.

If every year thirty or forty giant trees were removed and replaced with a younger generation of trees (from local, native stock), then Carmel would always have a diverse urban forest of trees at all stages of maturity — an urban forest that would be healthy and not so much of a threat to the humans living within it.

Steen's departure from Big Sur Land Trust

Dear Editor:

Eighteen years ago, I joined a dedicated group of community leaders as Executive Director of the Big Sur Land Trust. Since then, thanks to the hard work of public and private agencies, landowners and the contributions of time and funds from hundreds of supporters, the job of preserving the coast is nearly complete.

Late last year, I left the Land Trust to pursue other endeavors and would like to thank everyone who has helped in this effort. It has been my pleasure to work with and learn from some of the most creative people that any community could have.

I will continue to support conservation efforts on the Central Coast and look forward to being of further service to the community.

Wants to save Carmel Valley Vintage Airfield

Dear Editor:

This is in response to the misinformation about Carmel Valley Airport contained in Mr. Sherwin's opinion piece, "Readying CV for a New Age," in last week's Pine Cone.

Current plans for now what is called the Carmel Valley Vintage Airfield are to construct 11 or fewer European country-style homes. In addition, there will be three modest storage buildings to store antique aircraft. There will be no museum, there will be no airshows, there will be no buzzing of ridges.

Carmel Valley airport was built in 1941 as one of the country's first airparks. It is now a public-use airport that is open to anyone to fly in and use. With the addition

Drug den alleged headquarters for fraud and burglary

By TAMARA GRIPPI

AN ALLEGED "crash house" for drug addicts on Lobos Street became the key that helped Carmel police solve a recent jewelry store burglary and credit card fraud.

While investigating a stolen credit card shopping spree, Carmel Police Lt. Bill Uretsky recognized the name of one suspect whom he first encountered a month ago in the alleged drug den.

When Uretsky caught up with the suspect January 29, he reportedly found a switchblade and a half-gram of crystal methamphetamine on 22-year-old Dean Zaccaglini, of Seaside.

When questioned, Zaccaglini reportedly admitted to police that he'd taken part in the credit card fraud that involved 30 stores on the Peninsula, including six Carmel stores.

However, Zaccaglini reportedly pointed the finger to others involved in the crime, including a 27-year-old transient.

When police searched the drifter's car, they found a baseball bat converted into a mace with three-inch wooden screws sticking out.

They also found 50 tablets they believed to be "synthetic heroin."

Charges against the transient are pending drug analysis of the suspicious tablets in a Department of Justice laboratory in Watsonville.

Helpful tips

Meanwhile, Zaccaglini's interview with the police gave them yet another helpful tidbit. He reportedly said he knew who was responsible for the January 3 burglary in which a window display at the Treasure Chest on Ocean and Monte Verde was smashed and $5,000 in jewelry was taken.

His tip led police to a third person — this one a 22-year-old man living with his grandmother in Carmel. Police found a stolen ring that the man had apparently given his grandmother. Ironically, the Carmel man said he bought the ring from Zaccaglini.

Police found a baseball bat converted into a mace with three-inch wooden screws sticking out . . . .

Zaccaglini in turn reportedly told police that the Carmel man asked him to sell the loot in exchange for drugs.

Zaccaglini has been arrested and charged with the credit card theft, possession of methamphetamines and the switchblade knife, as well as possession of stolen property, according to Uretsky.

A warrant was also issued for the Carmel man on charges of possessing stolen property.

The police's first contact with Zaccaglini and others dates back to problems at the Lobos Street house in early January.

Neighbors reportedly informed police that eight to 10 transients were living in the house, using drugs and stealing from its owner, an elderly woman living elsewhere.

The woman's son, currently serving time in jail, apparently told the people they could live in his mother's house, Uretsky said.

At the time, Uretsky and other officers towed four cars from the property that had stolen plates and stolen registration stickers. Police also found clothes, jewelry, furniture, clocks and antiques in the cars, presumably belonging to the elderly woman. However, none of the people living in the house admitted to taking the property.

Without probable cause, Uretsky and other officers couldn't search the house. But last month the owner was able to evict everyone who had been living there.

CORRECTION

IT WAS mistakenly reported last week that the sculpture outside Roy's restaurant at the Inn at Spanish Bay is a duplicate of a city-owned sculpture called "Valentine."

Although Robert Fisher, chairman of the Committee for Art in Public Places, said that the two sculptures were identical, The Pine Cone has learned that "Afternoon in the Park" is a different work by a different artist from the same Colorado town.

The Pine Cone regrets the error.

VALLEY

Tuesday morning even though the Middle School had also lost power and was without heat.

Schumann said the Red Cross transferred most of the elderly to MPC, where they would be more comfortable. Some, like Hansen, chose to stay closer to their homes at the middle school.

Other evacuations were ordered at Quail Lodge and four low lying areas through Carmel Valley Village, including Camp Stephanie, Lower Circle, Los Helechos and Garzas Road.

"I think people were ready this time," said Carmel Valley Fire Captain Jeff Trapp. Carmel Valley firefighters evacuated 1,000 people in the early morning of Feb. 3.

The day before the heavy rains, local firefighters distributed 8,000 sandbags, courtesy of Monterey County Water Resources, for residents to shore up their property. Apparently, the sandbagging was a success.

According to Trapp, several homes had minor water damage (a couple inches of water instead of a couple feet).

"From our standpoint, you have to do something before it's a problem," Trapp said. "We found things we could do to let people help themselves."

Dangerous mudslides

Perhaps the biggest threat in the valley was from mudslides. According to Mid-Valley Fire Chief Gary Carmichael, there were at least 20 different slides on Carmel Valley Road. The road was reopened Feb. 4.

Several houses were damaged by mudslides, though the extent of damage wasn't clear, Trapp said.

Robinson Canyon Road lost several private bridges and a house burned to the ground Thursday morning. Firemen speculated that it may have been caused when the electricity came back on in the empty house after two days in the dark.

Hitchcock Creek flooded its banks and Robinson Canyon Creek turned into a major river when rushing waters widened it from eight-feet wide to 40 feet. One home that had been at a safe distance from the creek is now right up against its edge, Carmichael said.

"If the river comes up again, that house is a goner," Carmichael said.

In Valley Hills Center, Hacienda Hay and Feed and the parking lot were flooded. Six homes in the Quail Lodge subdivision were inundated, but the hotel was high and dry. (See related story, page 10A.)

Evacuations were ordered in the vicinity of Quail Lodge, where six homes were flooded. The Carmel River, visible at left, was not deemed the culprit in the flooding. Rather, runoff from hills inundated the development, and damaged homes are shown at center.

DeFaria's film 'The Borrowers' bows nationally as he leads Carmel productions for kids

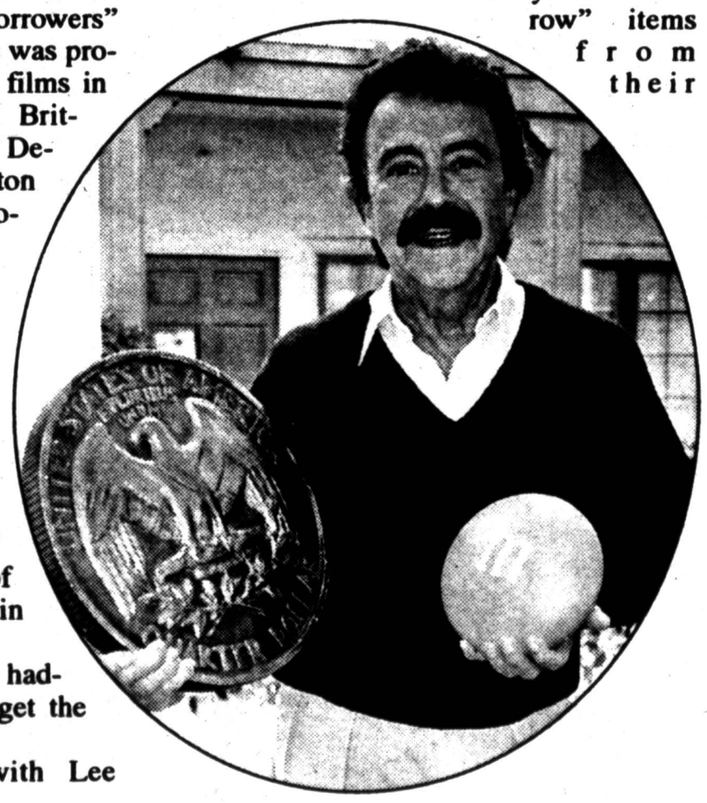
By MARGOT PETIT NICHOLS

EXECUTIVE producer Walt deFaria will be fêted next week at a tailgate party in a Monterey parking lot in celebration of the national opening of "The Borrowers" — an action-packed, special effects-filled children's adventure film.

Up-beat and unpretentious, deFaria doesn't fit the stereotype of a big time movie exec. A tailgate party in Monterey with friends is right up his alley — but so is local theater. You may have glimpsed him behind the scenes during recent productions of Pacific Repertory Theatre, Carmel Ballet Academy and Dance Kids, Inc.

An international award-winning film and theater writer/director/producer, deFaria has made his home in Carmel Valley for the past 10 years while flying about the globe for his various creative endeavors.

His affiliation with "The Borrowers" began in the early 1970s when he was producing and directing a series of films in Los Angeles for Encyclopedia Britannica called "The Unexplained." DeFaria became friends with Clifton Fadiman, an advisor to the program, who asked if he had read the script for "The Borrowers," based on Mary Norton's series of children's books published in England.



Walt deFaria, executive producer of 'The Borrowers' motion picture, holds larger-than-life props utilized in the film.

DeFaria acknowledged that he hadn't, and Fadiman urged him to get the script.

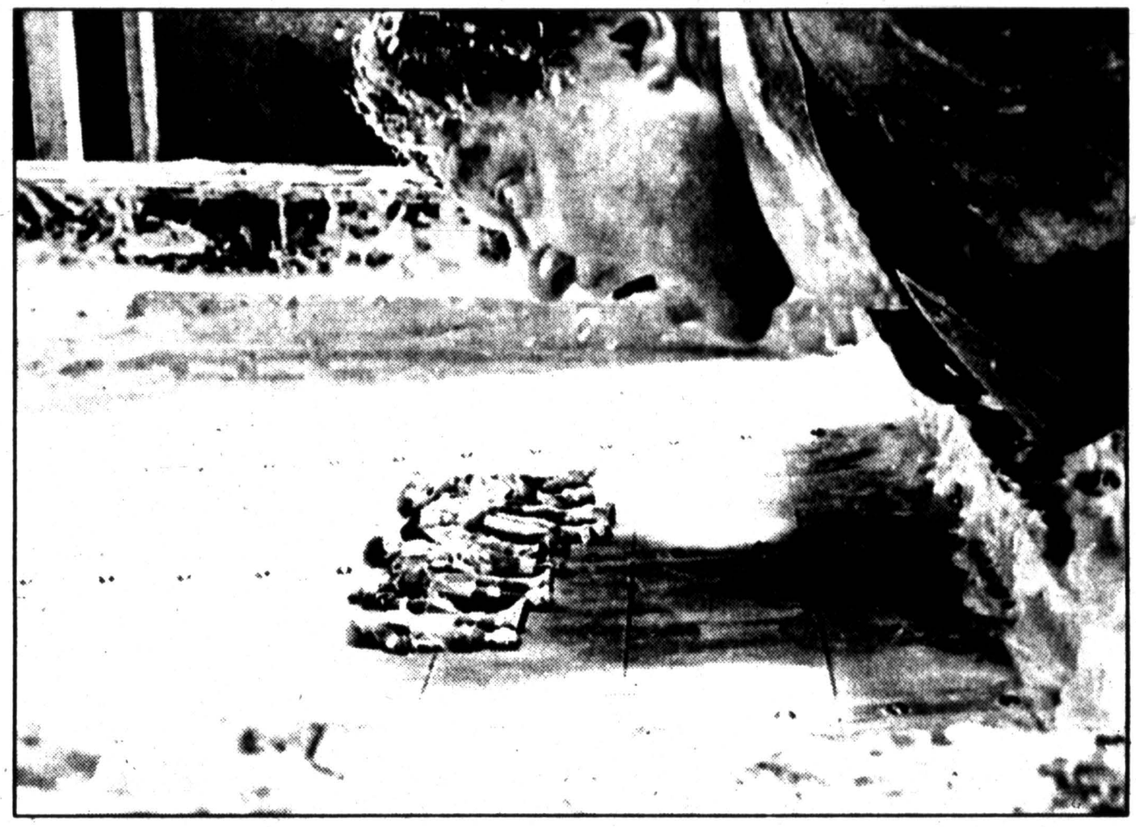
"I had started in films with Lee Mendelson Productions of television network specials, like the Charlie Brown films — my children were the voices of the characters in those days — and I produced 'Snoopy at the Ice Follies' for NBC-TV. I called Charles Schultz, creator of Snoopy," deFaria said, "and together with him and Foote, Cone & Belding Advertising, we bought the rights to the script.

"We got the show on the air — starring Dame Judith Anderson, Tammy Grimes, Eddy Albert Sr. and Beatrice Straight — and we won Emmys in the U.S. for it in 1973."

The Borrowers

'The Borrowers' are tiny people

Mary Norton's books have as their protagonists the "borrowers," 4-inch tall people who live discreetly beneath the floorboards and between the walls of homes and offices, taking great pains to go undetected. They also "borrow" items from their human hosts. Such mundane objects as socks, pens and postage stamps all have special uses for the tiny folk, who turn them into beds, bridges and wall decorations. Adventures follow when they are discovered and befriended by a normal-size boy.



JOHN GOODMAN stars as the evil lawyer, Ocious P. Potter, in 'The Borrowers.' Potter says his final words to the tiny Clock family.

"It took me 18 years to get anyone interested in doing a television series of 'The Borrowers,'" deFaria told The Pine Cone this week. "But several years ago, with PolyGram Films, I became executive producer of the Working Title/BBC television series which won the CableAce award in 1995.

The following year, back home in Carmel Valley, deFaria wrote the book and lyrics for a musical of "The Borrowers," which was presented in Carmel the Christmas before last by Pacific Repertory Theatre in a concert version. DeFaria hopes to get it staged here in the future as a "full blown musical."

Movie to be released next week

"The Borrowers" film — opening at Galaxy Six Cinemas in Monterey on Friday the 13th — is a PolyGram Films presentation of a Working Title Films production, produced by Tim Bevan and Eric Fellner ("Four Weddings and a Funeral," "Fargo," "Dead Man Walking"), with Rachel Talalay ("Cry Baby") also serving as producer.

Walt deFaria is the executive producer of the film that took 17 weeks to shoot on five sound stages at Shepperton Studios and two weeks of location shooting in Berkshire and in and around West London.

Asked to clarify the difference between a producer and an executive producer, deFaria said that a producer oversees the

By LYN BRONSON

THE ACCLAIMED young cellist Matt Haimovitz will perform a recital with pianist Lori Lack at 8 p.m. Tuesday in Sunset Center. This concert is presented by the Carmel Music Society.

Haimovitz

Haimovitz is a native Californian who as a child prodigy won every competition he ever entered. After training at the Juilliard School he emerged as a cello virtuoso of the first rank and made his professional debut in 1985 with the Israel Philharmonic conducted by Zubin Mehta. With his 1989 debut recording on Deutsche Grammophon of the Saint-Saens, Bruch and Lalo concerti with the Chicago Symphony Orchestra and James Levine, Haimovitz became acknowledged as one of the finest young artists of his generation.

His program features works by Beethoven, Debussy, Ligeti and Mendelssohn.

Tickets are $25, $20 and $15. Group rates and student tickets are also available. For information call 625-9938.

THERE WERE leaden skies, falling rain, pounding mud-colored surf, no sand on the beach, and fallen tree limbs and pine cones littering the soggy and puddled walking path above the bluffs on Scenic Drive — yet it was business as usual for Pepper and Candy Belleci.

These two stalwarts, deprived of their daily Carmel beach run, took to the redwood chips bordering the Scenic walking path early Tuesday morning.

Pepper, 5, a German shepherd mix, and Candy, 7, a Brittany spaniel, have been happy housemates for almost five years. While Candy was out for a lone stroll one day five years ago, a tiny three-month old Pepper appeared out of nowhere, and toddled home after her. Mom Carol tried every means possible to find Pepper's owners, but their misfortune was Pepper and Candy's great luck. They became step-siblings.

Both Pepper and Candy live to run across Carmel beach each morning, and even though the sand has been swept out to sea, exposing huge shelves of smooth bedrock, they have faith that the sand will one day return. Until then, the bark is no worse for their plight.

(Editor's note: All right; now you've done it. This is an order: Go back to the literary allusions, and drop the puns!)

RESTAURANTS

STILLWATER RUNS DEEP

■ STILLWATER BAR & GRILL

The Lodge at Pebble Beach; gate fee waived with reservations.

☎ 625-8524

STARTING A review with a maxim may be considered journalistic hokum, but in the case of the brilliant retrofit of Pebble Beach's former Cypress Room, it's right! There's so much more to the smashing restaurant than is immediately apparent; more planning, more expertise and finally more surprises, than could be expected of the venerable but formal Pebble Beach clutch of eateries. Jackets and ties not required here.

An initial surprise for me was the "boathouse" feel of the architecture . . . it's been done magnificently in the style of Australia's "Bathers Pavilion" in Sydney . . . I didn't expect it here. Exposed, pale Warren structure beams buckled with black iron swoop down on huge expanses of glass. Overhead spots and eye-level lamps wash the whole in light which flatters the most senior guest. This is destined to be a happy room with happy diners. Attentive waitstaff like our Jeff and his backup trio will assure it.

Oyster primer

The first pleasure proved to be a primer on oysters. On hearing raves about the raw oyster bar, I'd hoped for my favorite Chesapeake Bay Chincoteagues, but this former Easterner wasn't a bit disappointed with a taster's dozen of Malpeques, old favorites Blue Points, new acquaintances velvety Kumomotos, and the happy discovery of Maple Points from Puget Sound. They have the same "crunch" as the "Blues," but they're larger and carried the rosy Balsamic mignonette sauce deliciously.

My companion in tasting and I opted to share an appetizer of Monterey Bay Red Abalone. It arrived jewel-like and spilling from an iridescent abalone shell, fork tender and memorable. Curled beside it was a subtly-spiced nest of angel hair pasta adorned with sweet red pepper antennae.

As a seafood lover, I found myself like a kid in a toy store. Banquet Chef Owen Appelt came to my rescue and suggested appetizer, tasting portions of two fish . . . an Ahi Tuna robed in nori (edible seaweed) and herbs plus a sensational Escolar . . . fish. Escolar, where have you been all my life? My new finny friend was flaky, snow white and delicate and I asked Jeff what it looked like in the wild. Was it a flat fish, large or small, and where would we find one? It was suggested that it might belong to the butterfish family. Rushing home to the bookshelves I find that butterfish are found in cold Northern Atlantic waters and also in warm Pacific saline riverways . . . Can these two be related? . . . great confusion. No matter, for this writing, the fish by any name is exquisite! Chef Todd Fisher "leaves" a fat crosscut with a green and subtle garlic butter, pairs it with potatoes whipped with andouille sausage, sprinkles a few wild mussels over a seasoned jus, and oh my, go away and let me eat!

Traveling Gourmet

By Lotte Mendelsohn

Ear-to-ear grin

Because not everyone is tuned to a complete seafood feast, one of the entrees we chose was the tandoori spiced lamb tenderloins. They came buttressing a white bean and roasted acorn squash purée dominating a puddle of sun-dried tomato jus, with green chard "wings." The lamb was properly pink, and had husband Bert grinning from ear to ear. The two other alternatives for the less-than-enthusiastic-about-seafood contingent, read equally well: Blackened rib-eye steak with horseradish cream, wedge-cut fries, and sautéed spinach; and Wild Mushroom Risotto with braised artichokes sloshing properly about in an herb broth.

Desserts were tempting, but as with columns, "space" allotment was limited. We plan to return and sate our sweet tooths . . . (teeth?) with the crystallized ginger takeoff on Créme Brûlée, and I particularly want to try the Sweet Dim Sum. A word also about the wine list: it might be called masterfully playful by some or brilliant by others. The "game" is for everyone from the most serious wine drinker to the amateur oenophile like myself.

Congratulations to everyone who had a hand in this brilliant resurrection of a landmark.

'Kwela Bafana-Move Boys' comes to Sunset Theater Saturday.

✔ 'Kwela' beat infuses Sibikwa Players' revue

AN INTERMINGLING of traditional African music, Black American music and the South African township "kwela" beat infuses Saturday's Performance Carmel production. Titled "Kwela Bafana-Move Boys," the song and dance revue stars The Sibikwa Players in a rare American appearance. Curtain is at 8 p.m. in Sunset Theater.

Set in a South African "shabeen" or bar, this salute to the musical life of the '50s and '60s is both testimony to the richness of South African cultural life and a nostalgic visit to time lost to history.

At the dawn of apartheid, the ruling Afrikaner government imposed a set of strict laws including the Separate Amenities Act which forbade "whites, blacks and coloureds" from mixing or performing together in public. Exposed to American movies, music and the American dream, the African-American became a symbol of freedom to millions of black South Africans.

Classic American songs like "Summertime" and "The Great Pretender" appear alongside pulsating South African songs such as "Yombela, Yombela" and "Bangibiza," interspersed with satirical skits based on the writings of Casey Motsitsi, who wrote about life in the townships.

Tickets are $16 and $12.50. Sunset Theater is on San Carlos at Ninth, downtown Carmel. Call 624-3996.

✔ 'Sensual Indigo' author previews book Sunday

CARMEL WRITER, poet and artist Judith Wynne Winslow will present a preview of her book "Sensual Indigo — Memoir of a Renaissance Woman" from 1:30 to 3:30 p.m. Sunday at The Carmel Woman's Club, San Carlos at Ninth, Carmel.

Published this month by Fresh Art of Carmel, the book will be available at local bookstores and Fresh Art outlets. Information: 624-6820.

✔ Pianist Aaron Miller makes local debut

AARON MILLER is a young pianist destined for greatness. Just having turned 17 a few months ago, this resident of Aptos is already a seasoned artist.

His record of winning local, state and national piano competitions is staggering, and he has appeared as soloist in concerto appearances all over the State of California (his most recent being his engagement last month as soloist with the Santa Cruz Symphony in the Schumann Piano Concerto).

Miller

Next month Aaron flies to New York City to apply for the Juilliard School of Music. You will be able to hear him in recital at 3 p.m. Sunday in the Music Hall at Monterey Peninsula College, in a recital jointly sponsored by the Monterey County Branch of the Music Teachers, Association of California and MPC. This concert is a benefit for the Music Teachers Scholarship Awards Program. Admission is by a donation of $5. For further information call 624-9541

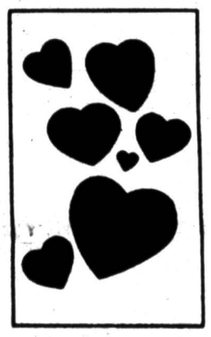
The same can be said for the Mili group with novelty shirts, striped or with appliqués (playing cards, tulips, etc.) and coordinating tank tops and shells. Coordinating makes good 1998 sense! While there, be sure to see the new Ann Crimmins! More later on that. The Crossroads, near Pezzini's. 624-4912

Chatterbaux Children's Shoppe

It's a delightful potpourri at all times. Speaking of CHATTERBAUX Children's Shoppe, of course, where there's no telling what you might find. For instance, Ginny carries a full line of Avent baby bottles and supplies, clinically proven to reduce colic in newborns. You should see her pigskin and leather jackets and coats, ideal for the teenager. Just in, a shipment of those hard to find adorable French Marie Carolle dolls. And then there's a Swedish wooden highchair that turns into a play table! See what I mean? 157 Fountain, PG. 647-8701. (Open 10-ish each morning; close 5pm or so. Rush-hour sales each Thursday 5-7 pm.)



Valentines without calories! That's one of the reasons RAINBOW SCENT CO. is the perfect place to buy Valentines. You'll be able to say "I love you" in many charming ways with such a profusion of heart-shaped soaps, romantically scented soaps, gels, lotions, massage oils, handcreams, and many other bath and body products, including as you know, Crabtree & Evelyn. Why not a gift package or basket filled with things for pampering? And of course they have Valentine cards by the score! RAINBOW SCENT CO. - your Valentine headquarters, now in one location on Lincoln St., near Ocean, in Carmel-by-the-Sea. (next to Carmel Bay Co.) 624-6506

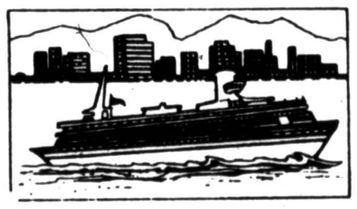
catherine's is offering 10% off everything in the shop through Valentine's Day, so give yourself a Valentine or make sure you drop a big hint! Three special groups just in: lightweight corduroy in pale baby blue - skirt, vest, drawstring pants and t-shirt, perfect for the office on one of those "casual Fridays"; peach group in cotton with fleece lined jacket, pants and striped t-shirt, a notch above a jogging suit; group in black and sand stretch lycra/acetate with long dress t-shirt-style and solid black or sand jacket that, catherine says, just pack in the bottom of your lunch box without a wrinkle! Delightful Valentines! 405 Calle Principal, Mtry. 646-1565

Marge has done it. She's packed up all those wonderful separates at TOWN OR TRAVEL and has moved them over to Carmel Plaza! You'll love the new shop - much larger, much lighter and easier to find what you're looking for! You'll find a lot! Beautiful new Bleyle for spring includes stunning blouses with large floral prints; grass green and white "zebra" print tunic with solid green pants; "dressy" two piece outfit by Leon Levin in subtle champagne and of course, all the usual vests, sweaters, jackets, pants and tops. Validated parking in the lower level garage; an elevator whisks you to the upper level; enjoy! 626-0276



MONARCH KNITTING & QUILTS

How's your knitting coming along? Need inspiration? A nudge? Just step inside MONARCH KNITTING & QUILTS and ask Joan to show you her new yarns and you'll be off and running! Lots of new heather colors, from raspberry to olive, even a "baby" heather by Encore. Great for baby things, for children, for all ages, only $4.39 a ball. More Lamb's Pride worsted in a single ply which makes knitting with this yarn so easy. Colors from denim (yummy!) to khaki, even woodgrain. Pick up a Valentine here in the form of Heart Warmers - bears, rabbits and dogs carrying hearts in their paws, no doubt stolen ones. 529 Central, PG. 647-9276

If your fine Oriental rugs need cleaning, yet you don't want them out of sight, CHARLES BELMONT will take care of them right in your own home. Charles, a master Oriental rug specialist for 48 years, uses a method of special hand cleaning that doesn't use steam, soap, foam or powder. It's safe and effective as well as wonderfully convenient. Prim & Proper

Probably as you read this, Dea at PRIM & PROPER is making further mark downs on all those fall/winter goodies! That means the popular fashion lines - Cambridge Dry Goods, Susan Bristol, Sigrid Olsen, Gotcha Covered, Philippe Marques, David Brooks are now yours at 50% to 75% off! Almost too good to be true, but it's true. And since these lines are so wonderfully classic and lasting, you'll be getting a wardrobe for now and many seasons to come. Obviously, arrive pronto! And be sure to take a look at the spring that's already in! 553 Lighthouse, PG. 372-5563

Romancing THE CONE

Questions concerning love and wisdom were posed to a group of children (ages 5 to 10). Their responses were amazingly astute and very enlightening, thus proving that all we need to know, we probably learned in kindergarten.

WHEN IS IT OKAY TO KISS SOMEONE?

"Never kiss in front of other people. It's a big embarrassing thing if only body sees you. But if nobody sees you, I might be willing to try it with a handsome boy, but just for a few hours."
(Kelly, 9)

More facile answers to Carmel conundrums

By MARGOT PETIT NICHOLS

This week, by fax, a couple who described themselves as "neophyte Carmelites" asked the following:

Q: Why do some people call it the "Golden Triangle" (instead of rectangle)?

A: They are confusing it with the Bermuda Triangle — and perhaps with reason: It should be noted that airplanes and boats have not been seen in the rectangle (bordered by Ocean and Santa Lucia and Scenic and Junipero) for a number of years.

Q: Is it okay to have a cat in Carmel?

A: It's all right, I guess. But understand — they'll NEVER be featured in Sandy Claws.

Q: Will there be trick-or-treaters at Halloween or is ALL door-to-door soliciting prohibited?

A: Door-to-door solicitations in Carmel require a police permit; however, Halloween trick-or-treaters need not apply for a permit unless they intend to utilize wheelbarrows or plan big-time monetary demands.

Q: Why do a few houses on Mission between 12 and 13 avenues — that appear to be within the city limits — have house numbers?

A: The operative word here is "appear." These suspect houses are currently under investigation by Fox Mulder and Dana Scully.

Q: Do we get to shoot people whose dogs leave "nuggets" on our driveway or in our yard?

A: Wouldn't this be a non-productive move?

Q: How can you tell if the tree in front of your house is a "city tree" or yours?

A: It's a city tree if it's free of blight, presents a pleasing silhouette and affords an attractive backdrop for tourist photos. It's yours if it's diseased, has been known to KO hapless passersby with limbs laden with grenade-like pine cones or has caused pedestrians to slip and fall on its exposed roots.

Q: We've heard about the "doors house" (house made completely from doors). Where did it go?

A: At first, we thought this was another X Files case or perhaps that it disappeared in the Golden Triangle — until we learned that it actually moved from Lincoln to a new site on Mission between Alta and Vista.

More facile answers next week.

'Jocks' reign supreme at golf writers' gathering

People and Places

By Dodie Barkley

I WAS not in my usual milieu at the California Golf Writers Association (CGWA) Annual Awards Banquet, held Jan. 27 at The Inn at Spanish Bay. And, boy was it different — lively, gutsy, and all hell was about to break loose.

Several hundred golf writers, golfers, instructors, all big drinkers, eaters, et al, met to pay tribute to famous golfers and others who were instrumental in making golf an important part of athletics, world-wide.

Master of Ceremonies Bob Murphy spoke for quite a while, telling stories and several ribald jokes which seemed to amuse the audience, except for the 12 women who sat at a table adjoining mine.

Scott Simpson, who won the 1987 Open, was inducted into the CGWA Hall of Fame. As Paul Sullivan of the San Francisco Chronicle presented the award to him, Simpson's partner, Bill Murray, appeared on stage. Well, I can tell you that all hell did break loose — it was, to put it mildly, locker-room humor at its best.

Everyone was waiting to see 22-year-old Tiger Woods, named Amateur of the Year last year, receive the coveted Player of the Year Award this time. Distinguished writer Jaime Diaz of Sports Illustrated spoke admiringly of Woods as he handed him the award.

Woods modestly described how his father's interest in his career made him the golfer that he is. He was concerned about his father's open-heart surgery, noting that his dad traveled with him extensively. He ended saying, "Don't forget the children. They are like sponges; they learn quickly." The short speech garnered great applause.

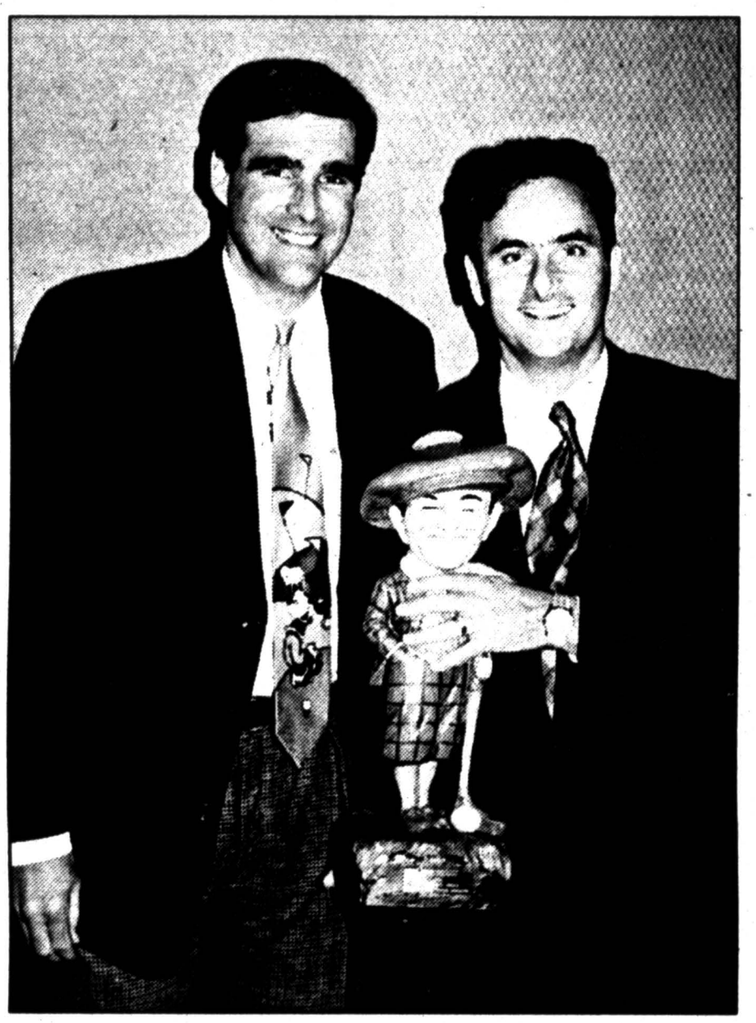
The following day, the same Bob Murphy emceed the Celebrity Challenge, and started making untoward remarks about the media who were eagerly taking pictures. He said: "You people shouldn't be here. Only CBS should be here. You (the media) don't pay for anything. You get everything free, and you obstruct the view of spectators who do pay."

I was flabbergasted at his remarks, wondering if he was aware that all media present, whether local, national or international, give the AT&T substantial free publicity in their columns, TV coverage and photos. Had he seen our local coverage? Does he know that when we trudge the fairways through the rain and mud, we don't mutter a word of complaint? Nor do we storm the professionals for autographs. And, last but not least, does Mr. Murphy realize that many of us chose to live and work here. I'd also be interested in knowing if Mr. Murphy himself paid the AT&T for the privilege of covering the tournament.

Still and all, the AT&T is the greatest show on earth. When you view the combination of the grandeur of the scenery, the incredible professionals, the marvelous celebrities, stars and spectators, it is a show-stopper sans peer. I spied Mike O'Meara preparing to hit the ball as he observed some pelicans flying over his head in great lazy circles. He smiled at them, as all of us do several times a day here in paradise.

Jaime Diaz of Sports Illustrated give the Player of the Year award to Tiger Woods at the California Golf Writers Association Annual Awards Banquet at The Inn at Spanish Bay.

CHUCK SCARDINA PHOTOS



KION TV sportscaster Hunter Finnell presented the Caddyshack Award to Irish golfer David Feherty.

Bill Murray salutes his partner Scott Simpson who was inducted into the California Golf Writers Association Hall of Fame at its Awards Banquet Tuesday, Jan. 27 at The Inn at Spanish Bay. Murray then captivated the audience with his ribald humor and stories.

■ Women's Association looks at literacy

Karen Albertus, representing the Monterey County Free Libraries Adult Literacy Program, spoke of the embarrassment felt by Americans who can't read. Her remarks were made to the Community Church of the Monterey Peninsula Women's Association luncheon meeting Jan. 21.

Albertus noted that America's illiterates can't tell time, figure math, get a driver's license, or receive a GED. Many foreign-born people may speak English, but cannot read or write the language. She advocated the excellent and highly rewarding tutoring programs available in the county for us all.

Tutors attend a preliminary workshop, volunteer four hours per week and meet with the students at public libraries.

Grace Merrill, who is a volunteer at the Boys and Girls Club, inspired us, describing her experiences as a four-year volunteer homework tutor there.

After a delicious salad luncheon, Association President Ruth McCampbell announced that $3,000 would be given to 10 charitable organizations, including the YWCA Battered Women's Program, AIDS for Monterey County, Family Resource Center and others.

Jean Macres read an excerpt from a spiritual tract, and First Vice President Marcella Stull was thanked for arranging the program.

If you want to help adults learn to read, call 899-0417 or 674-2681.

■ Good Egg becomes a double-yolker

"He's not only a good egg, he's a double-yolker," said Karin Strasser Kauffman at the 43rd Annual Installation Dinner and 44th Annual Good Egg Award ceremony of the Carmel Valley Chamber of Commerce. Kauffman, holding a plaque depicting two eggs yolks, said this is an historic occasion because it is the first and only time that a previous "Good Egg" recipient is to be honored again.

She was speaking of Lou Gardner of the Blue Sky Lodge. He wasn't present to receive the new award, but his children, Roger and Alyson Gardner, accepted it for him. I have never heard such compliments given to any human being as those that Kauffman and Randy Randazzo gave to Gardner. I would like to meet him some day.

The setting was Will's Fargo Restaurant, a must for everyone to visit. It is reminiscent of a western movie, with frosty glass-paneled doors and a gorgeous, polished bar with mirrors. And, of course, above the bar is the proverbial naked lady resting upon a couch. Every moment I expected to see a gambler rush in. Fabulous!

The food is another marvel. Huge cuts of prime rib, double baked potatoes and vegetables were served. Fruit cobbler desserts, tasting like they were just baked, ended the meal. I thanked co-owner Frank Quilty for the dinner, and promised to return soon.

Chuck McKay, a great Master of Ceremonies, introduced past president Pamela Norton, who spoke eloquently of the two years she served as Chamber president, calling the experience "just stupendous. If it wasn't for the volunteers, we wouldn't be here tonight. The $20,000 grant we received to advertise the Valley, made people realize that we have some of the best vineyards, resorts and unique businesses in the area," she said. At that, tremendous applause broke out. She thanked Quilty for helping to expand people's awareness of the area.

Incoming president Demi Briscoe, who was raised in Carmel Valley and lives there still, inspired everyone with her message of "Going Forward" as she introduced her 1998 officers: First Vice President Dorothy McEwen, Second Vice President Lisa Guthrie, Secretary Don Condren, Treasurer Frank Quilty, and many directors.

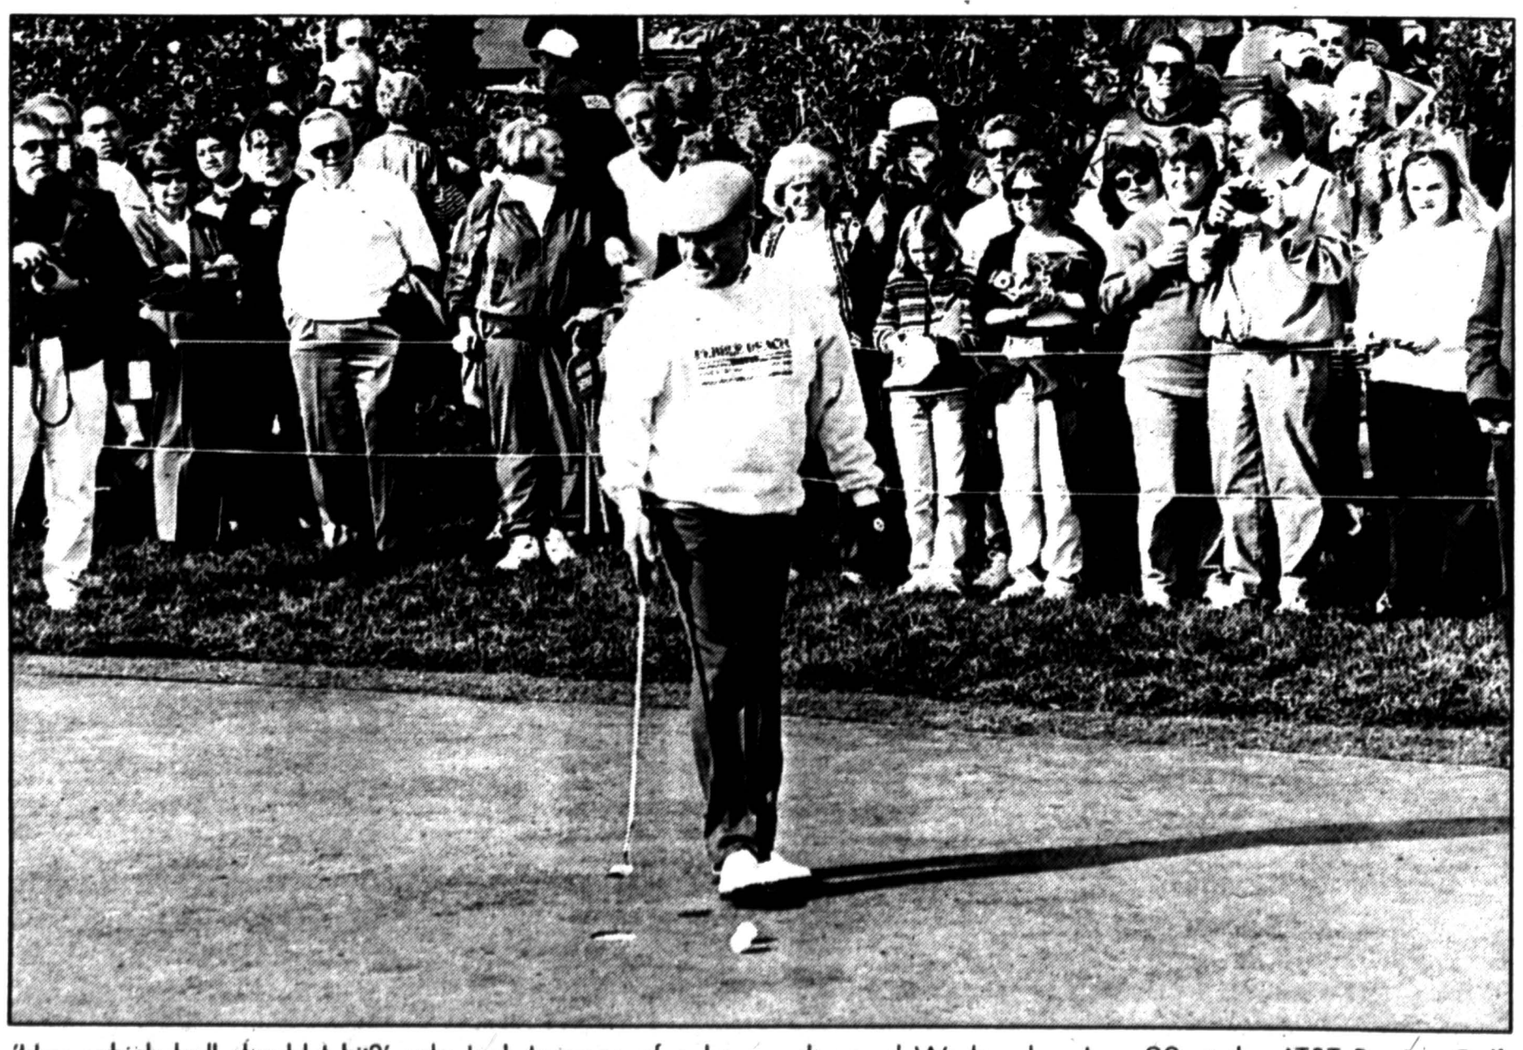
Then, the next important part of the evening com-



'Hey, which ball should I hit?' asks Jack Lemmon of a bemused crowd Wednesday, Jan. 28 at the AT&T Pro-Am Golf Tournament at Pebble Beach.

Guest speaker Karen Albertus, Women's Association first vice-president Marcella Stull, president Ruth McCampbell and recording secretary Grace Buby enjoy a few laughs at the Community Church of the Monterey Peninsula Women's Association luncheon, held Monday, Jan. 26.

menced—the awarding of the annual Good Egg Award to two Carmel Valley people.

Lee Rieman described how the first recipient helped out at every event in the valley — the Chili Cookoff, HOP, library events, flood relief and others. It was awarded to a very surprised Jim Fitch, who modestly thanked everyone and quietly took his seat. Lou Allaire talked about the incredible achievement of Walter Helm, the second Good Egg recipient. "We've all seen him walking along Carmel Valley Road, picking up papers and other materials there," Allaire said, bringing about tremendous applause. Helm thanked everyone.

Dorothy McEwen, owner of Holman Ranch, told me that she is off to Nagano to see the Olympics and then to Rangoon. McEwen is a world-traveler par excellence.

It was nice to see Judy Higgerson who was just elected president of the Monterey Chamber of Commerce, Gary Luce, Ed Haber, Lee Chamberlin, Jim Procida and others at this compelling event.

Former supervisor Karin Strasser Kauffman holds the "Double-Yolker Award" given to Lou Gardner of The Blue Sky Lodge. Gardner's children Ray and Alyson Gardner received the trophy on their father's behalf.

Carmel Valley Chamber of Commerce 1998 "Good Egg" recipients Jim Fitch and Walter Helm hold their marble "Good Eggs" as they compliment each other at the CVCC 43rd Annual Installation Dinner and Award Banquet. The ceremony took place at Wills Fargo Restaurant in Carmel Valley.

production of a film or play, with a line producer being on the set every day, making sure all goes well.

"The executive producer usually, but not always, owns the property," he said. "As executive producer, you bring all the elements together, such as the financing, the film company — and you have the right to approve the director, screen writers and actors. You don't usually have to worry about the day-to-day finances."

DeFaria summarizes his role with good humor: "An executive producer stands around and nods wisely."

Although deFaria has been involved in drama from his parochial elementary and high school days, and later at St. Mary's College in Moraga, he never studied acting. Instead, he earned a bachelor of economics degree.

"It's funny," he said, "but that line of study has been very useful to me in what I do. One of my jobs as an executive producer has been to be the money man."

Internationally known stars

John Goodman and Jim Broadbent star in "The Borrowers," along with Mark Williams, Hugh Laurie and Bradley Pierce.

Homilly (Celia Imrie), Arrietty (Flora Newbegin), Pod (Jim Broadbent) and Spiller (Raymond Pickard) face the nasty Ocious P. Potter in the new film, 'The Borrowers.'

"Goodman is a marvelous villain in the film," de deFaria said, "— but you're never truly frightened by him — he won't scare kids. And there's a lot of action."

Although "The Borrowers" has consumed much of deFaria's creative time over the years, he is known for such network shows as "The Wild Places," hosted by Paul Newman and Joanne Woodward and "Wild Science," hosted by Peter Falk, which he produced with his own DeFaria Productions, which later became The DeFaria Company.

Besides the CableAce Award and the Emmys, deFaria received the Peabody Award, a BAFTA and an International Emmy Award, and has been honored with two Christopher Awards.

He is a trustee of the Los Angeles Film Teachers Association and a member of the Directors Guild of America, the Academy of Motion Pictures Arts and Sciences and the Academy of Television Arts and Sciences.

The local theater scene

As well as writing and directing for local theater, deFaria does public relations and publicity work for the Carmel-based Pacific Repertory Theatre and for Carol Benton's Carmel Ballet Academy.

He is president of Dance Kids Inc., a non-profit organization, whose driving force, he says, is Benton. "We're currently preparing a second original ballet (following the well-received 'Red Shoes' staged here last year) which will be 'The Pied Piper of Hamlin' to be presented at The Sunset Center on June 13," he said.

"We're also in rehearsal now for an updated version of 'Cinderella,' entitled 'Here Comes Cindy.'" DeFaria and Steve Tosh wrote the book for the Pacific Repertory production which will open April 25 at The Golden Bough Playhouse here. There will be 70 children in the production.

DeFaria directed Pac Rep's community production of "Oliver," a musical mounted at the Forest Theater last summer, and will do the same for a production of "The Wizard of Oz" at the same outdoor venue this year.

DeFaria, a father of three and grandfather of six, said, "I'm having a wonderful time. It's great to work with kids."

'Painter of Light' Kinkade to address prayer breakfast

ARTIST THOMAS Kinkade will be the featured speaker at the 23rd annual Monterey Prayer Breakfast this Saturday morning at the Monterey Conference Center.

The prayer breakfast, which annually draws about a thousand people, is the local reflection of a national movement seeking to encourage people — from all denominations — to reflect and offer thanks and prayers for the nation and the community.

Kinkade, known as the "Painter of Light," will speak on "Our Response to Our Creator."

Kinkade views his art as his ministry and a gift from God.

Monterey County Sheriff Norm Hicks will serve as master of ceremonies, and music will be provided by "The Specs," a local group that styles its songs after barbershop and the Kingston Trio.

Child care will be available for the entire event, which begins at 8:20 a.m. in the Sierra Ballroom of the Conference Center at the end of Alvarado in downtown Monterey.

Tickets for the breakfast are $16. Individual and group reservations can be made by calling 648-3536.

KAY MATHIS turns over the keys of the kingdom to Steven Keller, who will assume Mathis' position as administrative coordinator in Sunset Center's Community and Cultural Department.

Kay Mathis retires from Sunset Center; Keller assumes post

SUNSET CENTER'S Community and Cultural Department's administrative coordinator, Kay Mathis, is retiring Feb. 13 from 10 years of city service.

Mathis joined the city in 1988 as an administrative assistant in the Public Works Department and in 1991 transferred to the city's Community and Cultural Department at Sunset Center where she worked as an assistant to director Brian Donoghue.

Mathis will be moving to the Henderson/Reston area of Virginia where her daughter and family live. Driving across country with Mathis will be her dog, Sugar Ray, and two cats, Butch and Sundance.

Steven Keller will move up to Mathis' position. "Steven's perfect for the job," Mathis said of Keller. "We've been like a family here."

Art and poetry sought for Cherry Center 'dreams and archetypes' exhibit

POETRY AND art are now being accepted by the Carl Cherry Center for the Arts for "Dreams, Art and Archetypes," an exhibit and poetry contest that focuses on themes from the unconscious mind.

Artists are encouraged to submit up to four slides related to the articulation and rendering of dreams, personal mythology and the visual language of the psyche. Postmark deadline is March 3 for artist's slides. Entrants must include a $25 entry fee and self-addressed stamped envelope. The exhibit opens April 4 with a reception for the artists and can be seen through April 24.

Poets are also encouraged to submit poems and short verse related to the theme of dreams and personal and collective mythology. There are no restrictions as to content, style, form or metrical device. All entries must by typed. Poets should also retain a copy of their poem.

Cash awards, books of poetry and certificates of merit will be presented at 2 p.m. April 4. Poetry entries have a March 3 deadline and are limited to three poems of not more than 24 lines per poem. There is a $7 entry fee per poem.

Poems and slides should be sent to the Carl Cherry Center for the Arts, P.O. Box 863, Carmel, CA 93921. For more information, call 624-7491.

City selects Green Valley Landscape for Piccadilly Park renovation work

GREEN VALLEY Landscape of Monterey has been selected by the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea to perform major renovation of Piccadilly Park on Dolores Street between Ocean Avenue and Seventh.

Mitsugu Mori's landscape business submitted the $80,932 low bid for the contracting job which will prepare and grade the site, install electrical and plumbing and do major landscaping. Funds for the renovation were collected by The Carmel-by-the-Sea Garden Club through various fund raisers.

1997 set records for million-dollar home sales

By PAUL MILLER

A RECORD number of homes in Pebble Beach were sold for more than $1 million last year. And the frenzied pace of sales is continuing in the early part of 1998, according to high-end specialist Mike Canning of Coldwell Banker Del Monte Realty.

"We had offers and counter-offers flying back-and-forth between Christmas and New Year's — and we even had offers during AT&T week," Canning said. Both weeks have usually been slow in the local real estate business. "It was the strongest January I've ever had," Canning reports. "I've never showed more million-plus houses than I did last month," he says.

1996 was a banner year for local high-end home sales. But 1997 was even better, with 38 homes sold for more than $1 million — including 9 homes that went for more than $2 million.

In addition, 32 condos adjacent to the Inn at Spanish Bay went on the market in 1997 for prices between $900,000 and $1.4 million — and every single one of them sold. Most Real estate brokers agree that the results at Spanish Bay were incredible.

There was a bit of a slowdown in $4 million-plus range compared to 1996. Four homes in this super-high-end category closed escrow in 1997, compared with 7 in 1996. There were no sales over $4 million in 1995.

Real estate brokers who specialize in other parts of the Peninsula market say that a lack of inventory — resulting from the surprising number of sales last year — may cause a slowdown in 1998.

There just aren't enough homes on the market to satisfy the strong demand. Prices will go up, but there number of sales could fall.

But one of the factors that will help keep the Pebble Beach real estate market strong in 1998 is the large number of homes for sale there. As of the first of the year, 45 homes in Pebble Beach were for sale at prices over $1 million — including 10 that can be snapped up for more than $4 million.

But Canning says the vigorous national economy is really responsible for the strength of the local real estate market. "You can't isolate a single factor," he said.

Monterey County Realtors honor top achievers, leaders

THE MONTEREY County Association of Realtors held its annual awards breakfast last Thursday at the Embassy Suites in Seaside to acknowledge local leaders in the industry.

Realtor Link

By Jeanette Menter

Ben Heinrich, president of the association, opened the meeting by speaking about the group's focus on five key issues: communication, education, unity, government affairs, and benefits of MCAR membership.

Ben stressed that he was going to spend time at offices of various members throughout the county in order to make everyone feel more at home with the association, saying that he would "spend as much time as I can to make you feel part of the organization."

Pointing out that this was going to be a political year, Sheryl McKenzie addressed local water issues which include a proposed Carmel River dam and the July 1 expiration of rights to reinvest water.

The prestigious 'Top Producer, Dollar Amount' award went to Coldwell Banker Del Monte Realty's Mike Canning. William Smith of The Pacific Bay Corporation took Top Producer in terms of number of transactions.

A Special Recognition Award for outstanding service and leadership in the government affairs program went to Tom Rowley of Century 21, Scenic Bay and Pete Salmonsen of Century 21, Allied Associates, Inc.

The Distinguished Service Award for outstanding service and leadership in the association was given to two organizations — the Monterey County Herald and Old Republic Title — and to three individuals — Barney Drummond of Greg Shankle Real Estate, Jeff Davi from A. G. Davi Ltd. and Perry Brasuell, Century 21, Red, White & Blue.

John Leo Memorial Achievement Awards went to over 100 well deserving Realtors — all of whom sold at least 2.5 times the average Realtor's production in one year.

This award is named for John Leo, a long time member of the association who was instrumental in creating RE Infolink, the listing service for Northern California associations and who worked hard to create a program to recognize the industries top producers in this area.

In December of 1996, one month before the first awards were to be presented, John passed away.

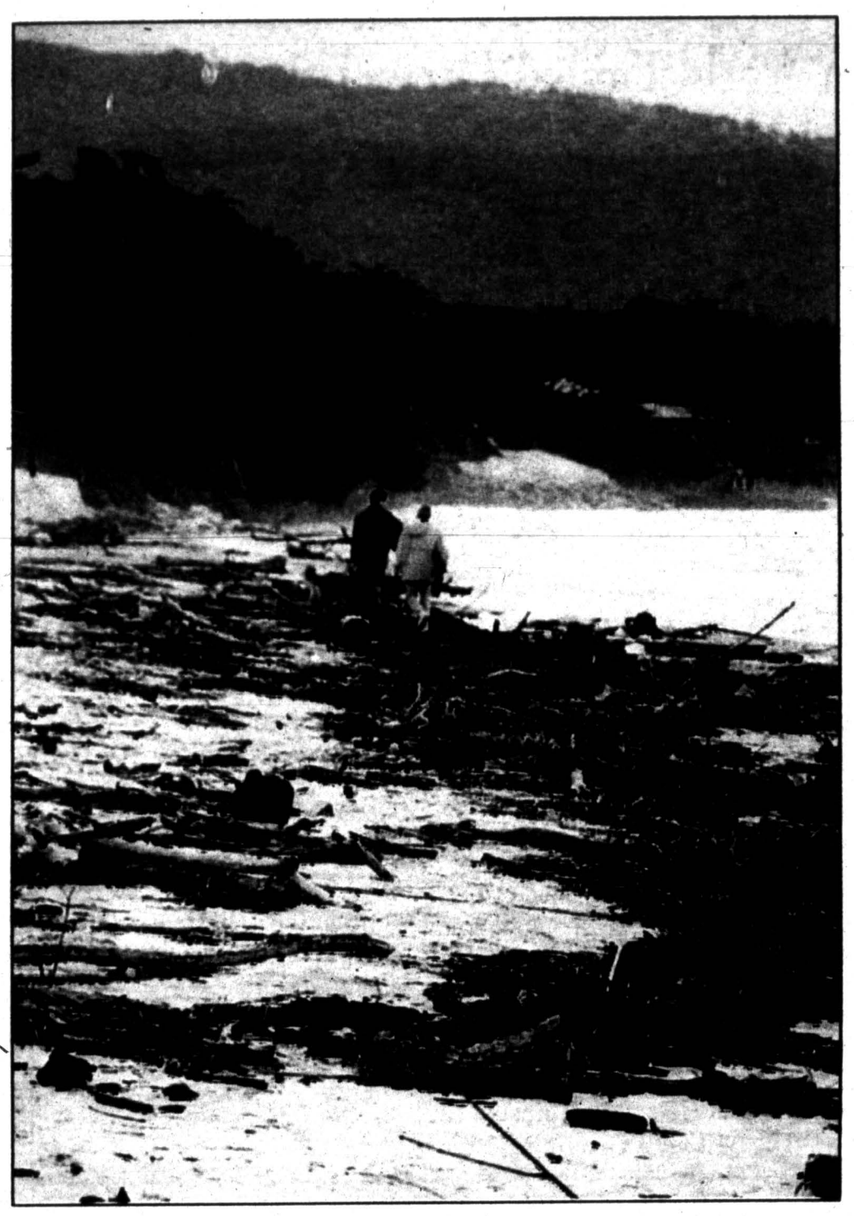
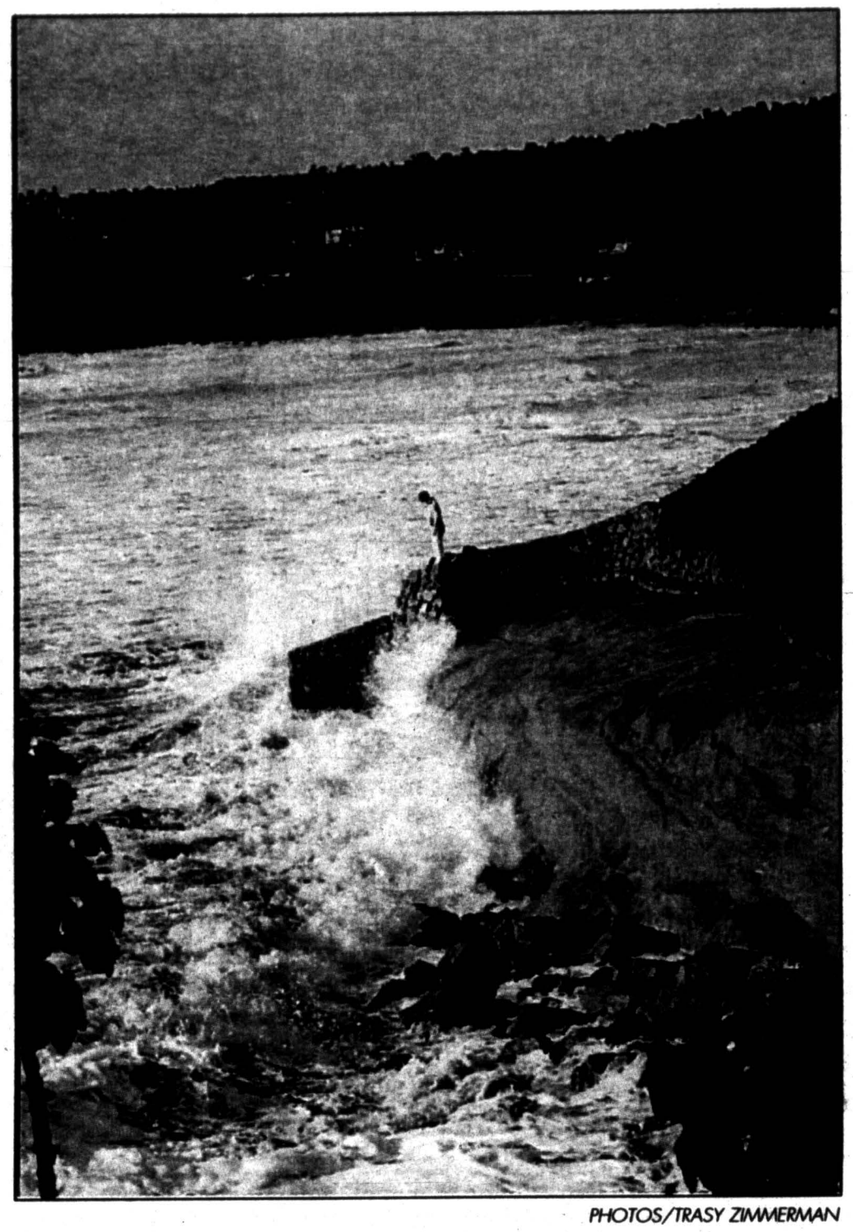
Storm-ravaged Carmel Beach should be viewed from a distance





PHOTOS/TRASY ZIMMERMAN

The storms of 1998 have brought waves right to the edge of the bluffs above Carmel Beach and swept much of its famous white sand away. Those portions of the beach that were open to foot traffic during low tide are carpeted with debris.

By PAUL WOLF

WITH ITS exposed bedrock, surf-battered bluffs, twisted stairways and thick accumulation of flood debris, Carmel Beach this week is a sight that is glimpsed only rarely.

Conditions are the most dramatic since El Niño last made waves in 1982-83.

The entire southern half of the mile-long beach doesn't exist at all during high tides — with surf reaching the cliffs with every wave, leaving absolutely no room for foot traffic on the beach itself.

Stairways leading to the beach that have survived the pounding surf are taped off to discourage anyone who wishes to tempt fate on the remaining sand and exposed rock.

In most places, the height of the beach has been reduced by six to eight feet, according to Public Works Director Jim Cullem.

Mayor Ken White estimates that as much as 12 feet of sand has washed away.

The loss of sand — a normal phenomenon every winter and especially severe this year — will be reversed in the months between now and summer, Cullem said.

One of the most dramatic sights can be found at 10th Avenue and Scenic, where the bedrock that used to be covered by sand looks something like a beached whale.

Last year's $350,000 "rip-rap" project, which consists of big boulders hugging the bluff around 10th, came in the nick of time to prevent parts of Scenic Road from caving in, according to Carmel City Administrator Jere Kersnar.

Near 13th Avenue, a protective concrete cap on top of sandstone has broken off (although not washed out to sea) and will need to be repaired. That work, however, cannot be carried out until summer, Kersnar said.

D'Ambrosio described the conditions as exceedingly hazardous. "No one should go down there," he said. "All it takes is one wave to take you out, or trap you between the waves and the rip rap or sandstone," D'Ambrosio said.

Use common sense

Carmel Police Chief Don Fuselier said it is not technically illegal to go on the beach, but police are doing what they can to patrol the beach and advise people to stay off. "We are hoping people will use common sense as we have limited time to look out for people while we deal with other storm emergencies," Fuselier said.

"To go down there is not illegal, but it's stupid," said Assistant City Administrator Greg D'Ambrosio summarized.

D'Ambrosio, Cullem and Fuselier said the only part of the beach that is relatively safe is near the Del Mar lot at the foot of Ocean Avenue — though even that part is hazardous because of huge waves, sand cliffs, and thick debris.

For now, Carmel's die-hard beach walkers are pretty much confined to the footpath along Scenic Road.

Snakes found on beach after flood washes them out of Carmel Valley

By PAUL WOLF

IT IS uncertain whether there are rattlesnakes on Carmel Beach, but you mustn't go fishing through the driftwood to find out.

That is the word from city officials, who say this extended storm has brought many surprises.

Three snake sightings have been confirmed, according to city officials, who believe the slithery creatures may have been washed down Carmel River during this week's massive storms.

Beware-of-snakes signs have been posted at the top of several Scenic Road stairways that lead to the beach.

"We certainly don't want a panic, but we don't want people rummaging through the driftwood either," Cullem said.

Cullem himself encountered a snake on the beach immediately north of the Del Mar Parking lot at the foot of Ocean Avenue on Tuesday.

The creature was captured and was confirmed to be a gopher snake, which, with its arrow-shaped head and tendency to hiss loudly, can be mistaken for a rattlesnake.

The gopher snake was relocated to a wooded area in Carmel, Cullem said.

He received another report from a Carmel citizen who saw a snake on Tuesday. In addition, members of the beach crew spotted what they thought were rattlesnakes on Monday.

Cullem said there may be quite a few snakes under the piles of driftwood blanketing much of the beach. But he suggested that surf conditions are far more perilous than the presence of snakes.

Flood control projects keeping Mission Fields relatively dry

By TAMARA GRIPPI and PAUL WOLF

FOR THOSE who remember how bad things were three years ago, the message from Mission Fields is loud and clear: Flood measures have worked.

"We'd be under five feet of water by now if the levee work wasn't done," Larry Dufur, a Rio Road resident who watched the water level reach his driveway, but not go into his house.

Three years ago, Mission Fields residents lambasted county officials for their late evacuation order in the January flood, and for ignoring a levee works plan that was collecting dust. The so-called Nolte Plan called for raising and lowering the levees on the Carmel River to afford the subdivision better protection.

County officials said there was no money to carry out the work, so the first thing residents did was assess themselves $222 a household to move forward. In 1996, mouth of the valley businesses volunteered to join the assessment.

This time, as Mission Fields families rested in shelters such as the Carmel Middle School, MPC and at friends' homes, they praised county public officials — and Clint Eastwood, who opened his Odello East land to controlled flooding.

Vowing to send a Valentine to the former Carmel mayor, whom she pretended to address directly, Rita Scott said, "Thank you for taking all this water in your yard, so we didn't have to take it in ours."

When the levee breaks

Twice in 1995 that neighborhood was devastated when the levee on the north side — little more than a reinforced dirt elevation — failed. Since then, the county has strengthened that levee and lowered portions of the levee on the south side, along the Eastwood property east of the Highway 1, and along the state-owned fields and the sanitary district west of the highway.

In a Pine Cone article published last year, county officials stated that the new infrastructure would almost certainly prevent the kind of flooding that occurred in 1995. So far they are right, but final judgment is being reserved, especially since another storm bearing up to 5 inches more rain is forecast for the week-end.

"It was a success (this week)," said Monterey County Public Works Engineer Joe Cochran.

See NEIGHBORHOOD page 9C

Alex Salmoun, 17, was pleased the water level only reached the garage of his family's Rio Road home, seen here.

Pebble Beach: A Pacific Grove resident reported that she had found three syringes washed up at the beach at Spanish Bay. Sheriff combed beach and found two.

NEIGHBORHOOD

Residents of Mission Fields have been troubled mostly by poor drainage from rain and street runoff, rather than a spilling-over Carmel River.

"At least something has been done (by the county)," said Mike Guardino, who lives at 3233 Sycamore, a house that was twice flooded but so far this year has escaped serious damage.

Regarding drainage, Carmel Public Works Director Jim Cullem compared the neighborhood to "a bathtub that doesn't drain." The trapped water on Rio Road and Mission Fields Road as of Tuesday was a perfect illustration of the problems of being at the lowest elevation with no escape.

Many Mission Fields residents hugged each other in relief after the worst of the mid-week storms.

All told, only one house was hit hard by the lack of drainage. Lance Monosoff's home on Riverside Way — at the lowest point in Mission Fields adjoining the Carmel River — filled up with two feet of water.

Rainwater runoff that couldn't escape the low-lying neighborhood was the cause of his property damage. It was not the result of the river punching through the north-side levee, as was the case in January 1995.

Under normal conditions, a depressed area in Monosoff's yard fills up with rainwater that then drains into the river. Early morning February 3, when the river began rising rapidly, the flaps of the pipes feeding into the river closed, as they're designed to do when the river rises.

At that point, the county began pumping out the water in Monosoff's pond, but the pump just couldn't keep up with the water, Cochran said.

Monosoff, a real estte broker, tried to keep things in perspective. "This is a small event," he said, comparing Tuesday's flood with the widespread devastation in Mission Fields that ruined 200 homes. in '95.

As he carried furniture back from a moving van, Monosoff said he's a little tired of being "the poster boy" for Mission Fields floods.

Across Highway 1, past the end of Rio Road, two other river-front homes flooded when the homeowner's own levees failed and the county's tie-back levee, recently completed last December, was damaged.

of a few modest-sized homes to the airfield, it will assure that most of the land will reman open space for locals to enjoy as they have for years. The air traffic is and will continue to be less than it has been in the past years. Those using the airport will be Carmel Valley residents and neighbors sensitive to the community they live in.

The Carmel Valley Vintage Airfield is an important resource to the Valley. It provides emergency facilities for floods and fire, open space for locals to jog and walk, it has been used for years for such community events as Santa's Fly-in and local parades. The plan is to save this resource from a developer who could take it away and build 29 homes or an RV Park.

Lars de Jounge, Carmel Valley

And it's free

Dear Editor:

Tired of reading about the President, Special Prosecutors, and all the other political hijinks going on back in Washington?

Well there is a publication that reports frankly about some very interesting and more important things going on right here at home. Nineteen of your neighbors produced it after a year of persistent investigation. They were able to subpoena reluctant officials, dig up hard-to-get documents, and poke around offices and buildings to get to the truth.

They uncovered some fascinating facts about many important local issues: Water, Land, Domestic Violence, Elderly, Health Care, Emergency Services, Seaside, Roads, Finances, etc..

The local papers have "leaked" a few of their findings, but there is a lot more for you to discover for yourself.

You can pick up this document — The Monterey County Grand Jury Report — at either the Monterey or Salinas courthouses. And the nicest part is that — since you have already paid your "independent citizens watchdog" group to produce it — it's free!

Dr. Mel R. Spehn, Carmel Valley

Garden Club says thanks

Dear Editor:

Our January 22nd Fundraiser with Elizabeth Murray was a huge success due in no small way to your timely and accurate write-ups. Your staff writer Margot Petit Nichols wrote an exceptional article about the upcoming event.

The Garden Club is most appreciative of your help. We have reached our $100,000 goal and are now on to renovating Piccadilly Park which should be completed by early summer.

Nancy C. John, President, Carmel-by-the-Sea Garden Club
